Arthur Brisbane's Own Story of the Convention

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Five minutes before the convention opens 12,000 or 14,000 persons are crowded into a big hall. The band is playing "Darling, I Am Growing Old," and there are bells and human voices mixed with the band.

William Jennings Bryan sits at the reporters' table, looking very well and busy, with a little pink flower in his buttonhole.

A thousand banners are in the hall and five men make it their business to remain constantly under each banner.

But in the street sad-eyed men out of work are temporarily busy carrying banners that denounce the enemies of Roosevelt. They are trying to keep step, but can't. A well-fed band leads them.

When it's over they will still be sad-eyed and worried—and the band still will be well fed.

The only news at this moment is the announcement that Senator Borah is not to make the T. R. fight against Root for temporary chairman. Francis McGovern, Governor of Wisconsin, is to be the candidate opposed to Root. At least the wise ones say so.

TIME TO START BIG FIGHT.

The band having finished with "Darling, I Am Growing Old," plays something gay, but no one notices the difference. The moment to open the big fight has arrived. Those that came here with real interest are serious, and about one per cent. of the total. The other ninety-nine are cheering. The chief and most easily heard words in the roar are "Roosevelt! He is all right!"

Not all his friends think so. Many bear the honor of organization. A few hours, or possibly minutes, and it will be known where the power lies. The contest is between the tremendous, popular, disorganized enthusiasm for Roosevelt, and cold, well planned, organized, scheming by the machine.

The convention cheers when told that Rev. Father Callaghan will ask a blessing.

He is only interrupted occasionally by the cries "Sit down."

The reverend father speaks in a magnificent and beautifully audible voice, and concludes a simple invocation with the Lord's prayer. The delegates that know the prayer join in.

Then a good young voice reads the official call for this convention, the usual call issued in the name of the Republican Committee.

HADLEY IS FIRST TO SPEAK.

Thus far no woman has distinguished herself, a most unusual and disappointing lack in an affair of this kind. A lady is undoubtedly present, however, and will appear later.

The first man to speak from the floor is Governor Hadley, floor manager for Roosevelt. Pale and grim, he said:

"I rise to a question of information."

While he walks to the platform a man in the gallery gives an admirable imitation of a crowing rooster, and is inimitable at that.

Hadley starts to read a short speech. He is interrupted by Watson of Indiana, who says nothing is in order until the convention is organized. Yells and cheers. The party has started.

The convention is called to order at one minute past twelve. Victor Rosewater, head of the National Republican Committee, pounds with his gavel and actually gets comparative silence. He is a small man.

His friends proudly say that he has "all the nerve" needed to run a steam roller. His success in almost silencing the crowd pleased him. The yelling stops as it does when a prize fight is about to start. The crowd does not want to miss anything.

After the opening of proceedings, a gentleman named Stone tried with a megaphone to get the aisles cleared. For a long time this could not be done effectively. The period of dullness was enlivened by a colored gentleman from Mississippi making what looked like a good speech.

He stood on a chair and waved a new crutch. Not a word was heard, but it was clear by the way the crutch moved that the speaker objected to tyranny.

TAYLOR AUTO CASE GOES TO THE JURY IN SECOND TRIAL

The fate of Paul M. Taylor, son of Edson F. Taylor, the wealthy Worcester real estate operator, who has been on trial before Judge McLaughlin and a jury in the Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge for recklessly operating his automobile and for running away after causing damage to persons and property, was placed in the hands of the jury today. Judge McLaughlin completed his charge to the jury at 11 o'clock.

This is Taylor's second trial. In January he was tried for manslaughter, but the jury disagreed after staying out all night. On September 23, 1911 at Marlboro, it is alleged that Taylor while joy riding ran into the car containing Mr. and Mrs. Frank Downes and their little daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Sullivan, all of Boston. Downes and Sullivan were killed. The women also were injured as was the chauffeur, Harry L. Nelson of Boston. The Downes girl escaped injury.

KEYES, ROOSEVELT DOUBLE, MOBBED AS HE ENJOYS DINNER

CHICAGO, June 18.—J. M. Keyes, the Roosevelt delegate from Concord, Massachusetts, who is a double of the colonel, had an exciting time in a Michigan avenue hotel cafe. The delegate was enjoying his dinner when there was a stampede toward him of persons who thought they were making on the ex-President. It was necessary to get a detail of police to clear the crowds who were about to rush the "candidate." Mr. Keyes wears on his lapel a button photograph of himself labeled: "I am Roosevelt's double. Can you beat it?"

SEVEN ROXBURY HOUSES BURNED

Two three-story apartment houses were destroyed, five others were partially burned, the roofs of two other dwelling houses caught this afternoon in a fire which threatened the entire Howard avenue and Lettersine terrace section of Roxbury. Four alarms were rung in for the fire, two from each of two boxes in the neighborhood. The damage amounted to more than $15,000.

Fourteen families were driven to the streets. The flames were first discovered in the three-story frame apartment house at No. 10 Lettersine terrace.

The fire spread rapidly, the flames communicating with the apartment house at No. 12, and thence in succession to the apartment houses at Nos. 14, 16 and 18. On the other side of No. 10 the fire caught in Nos. 6 and 8, doing considerable damage.

Flying sparks caught the roof of the house at No. 78 Woodcliff street, directly in the rear of No. 10 Lettersine terrace. Within a few minutes the three-story house at No. 74 Woodcliff street also caught.

The fact that the section is so thickly settled caused Chief Mullen to order a second alarm rung as soon as he arrived on the scene. The fire was fought from three sides, Howard avenue, the terrace and from Woodcliff street. It was reported the fire had been caused by children playing with matches.

The fact that he had but three fingers on his left hand may lead to the identification of an unknown man who died in the ambulance on the way to the Relief Hospital today, after being taken ill in a restaurant at No. 5 Green street. The man was about sixty years of age.

INSURGENT LEADER SURRENDERS IN CUBA

HAVANA, June 18.—General Vargas, a negro insurgent leader, and thirty of his men surrendered to government troops today, taking advantage of the federal proclamation granting amnesty to all rebels laying down their arms before June 21. The government claims to be winning rapidly through desertions of rebel soldiers. Three hundred laid down their arms yesterday throughout Oriente province.

REX E. BEACH IS TOTALLY BLIND

SEATTLE, Wash., June 18.—Rex E. Beach, admired by thousands who have enjoyed his stirring stories of the North or seeing them in play form, again has become afflicted with an old trouble of the eyes and is totally blind. It has been known to Mr. Beach's friends for some time that he was in danger of blindness, but the most recent attack on his sight was so sudden as to be a surprise.

ROOSEVELT GETS CRANE'S SCALP

By JAMES E. DONOGHUE.

CHICAGO, June 18.—W. Murray Crane gave up the fight this afternoon and announced that he withdrew as a candidate for the republican national committee. This is a complete victory for the Roosevelt clans, who led by the fighting eighteen Massachusetts delegates started war on Crane and went gunning for his seat.

The Roosevelt ans were told by the Colonel himself:

"Lick Crane. Keep him off of the national committee. He aided and abetted in the robbery of our delegates. Go to it, and go to it they did, fighting hard for Matthew Hale the young Boston Roosevelt ans for Crane's seat.

Crane is fighting for Taft. He consulted with leaders in a few whispers and decided that it would not pay to go into a fight and clutter on things, so he withdrew this afternoon. Much rejoicing by the Colonel and the Massachusetts 18! They predict that Matthew Hale will occupy Crane's seat in the national committee.

Two hours before the time set for the fall of the gavel at the Coliseum, all efforts to bring the rival Taft and Roosevelt eighteen together for the choice of convention officials and a National Committee man absolutely failed. Chairman Frederick Fosdick of Pitchburg, for the Roosevelt eighteen, and Speaker Cushing of the Taft side of the house, tried with Chairman Hatfield to get the delegation into a general meeting, but failed, both went into separate sessions, dismissed their conference committee and prepared for a fray in the convention.

The convention will determine who shall represent Massachusetts on the different committees, and another Taft-Roosevelt test vote will be precipitated on the convention. Both the Taft and Roosevelt eighteen will present separate lists of committee members to the convention.

By messengers to and fro between the hostile camps vacancies in the delegations were filled by tacit agreement. That is as neat, up to 10 o'clock, that the two delegations had come to getting together.

Colonel Smith, M. Decker of Lawrence, was the only regular delegate absent. His place was filled with his alternate, Dr. James R. Berwick of Methuen.

CONVENTION IN UPROAR; ROOT AND M'GOVERN NAMED

BULLETINS.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Just before the convention met, the Roosevelt leaders decided to support Governor McGovern of Wisconsin, the La Follette candidate for temporary chairman.

CHICAGO, June 18.—The battle was on as soon as the chaplain's prayer had been spoken in the Republican National Convention this afternoon.

Scenes of tumult and confusion began as soon as National Chairman Rosewater called the great gathering to order in the Coliseum at 12:01 p. m. It was fifteen minutes before quiet could be secured.

After twenty minutes' debate, Chairman Rosewater ruled out of order a motion by Governor Hadley of Missouri to substitute the Roosevelt contested delegates for the Taft men.

Governor Hadley appealed from the ruling of the chair. Watson of Indiana moved that the appeal be laid on the table. The chairman ruled out of order Governor Hadley's appeal.

Chairman Rosewater submitted the name of Elihu Root as temporary chairman at 1:21.

Job Hedges of New York seconded the nomination of Root and the wildest demonstration of the convention began.

The convention was called to order at The police helped here and there. Flash 12:01 p. m by Chairman Rosewater amidst of the picture man let off the blinding unprecedented scenes of confusion and flash. The chairman's gavel brought a shouting. The great Coliseum was packed semblance of order. The chaplain uttered to its capacity long before the silver gavel his two-minute prayer. The convention was fell. then really under way.

The bitter fight over the nomination, the climax of a campaign that has seen a President and a former President trail through half the states of the Union, was reflected in the attitude of the delegates.

Crowded in the aisles, standing on their chairs, one State cheering and another answering with its own discordant reply, the delegates refused to come to order so that the official photographer, who persistently pleaded for quiet, might take a flashlight photograph of the historic gathering.

Roosevelt Supports McGovern.

The program could not go on. The sergeant-at-arms struggled with the crowd.

Just as the flash was taken the band broke into the "Star Spangled Banner" and the delegates and host of visitors sprang to their feet and the most vociferous cheer of the morning swelled from the throng.

Slight confusion was caused when one of the flags near where the flash was fired was thought to have caught fire. The fire was quickly torn down by a man next to sawing the rafters.

Rev. Father J. S. Callaghan pronounced the invocation.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION FOR ROOT.

CHICAGO, June 18.—A great demonstration swept the convention when Job Hedges of New York, seconding the nomination of Elihu Root for temporary chairman, recalled Roosevelt's former endorsement of Root as a great statesman.

DRUGGISTS FINED FOR SELLING HEROIN.

For the sale of the drug heroin, Thomas H. O'Donnell, of East Cambridge, druggist and C. H. Grossman, an Arlington druggist, were each fined $25 by Judge Charles Almy in the Cambridge district Court today.

It at Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler. "Clear the aisles," cried Stone. "Clear them at once."

The assistant chief got busy. The aisles were soon cleared.

Secretary William Hayward then read the call for the convention.

During the prayer and the reading of the call cries of "301 down" were heard.

At the end of the reading of the call Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri arose and was recognized by the chair. He said:

"I arise to a question of information."

Hadley was escorted to the rostrum. Delegate Jim Watson of Indiana also came to the stand and was given applause.

Hadley asked whether a roll of the delegates and alternates to the convention had been prepared and intrusted to the officers of the convention. Delegate Watson arose to a point of order.

He asserted that until the convention was properly organized no matter of business should come before the house.

Governor Hadley then made a short address. He said he had arisen on a point of information.

Governor Hadley moved that the Roosevelt delegates en bloc be substituted for the secretary's temporary roll. There was great cheering from the Roosevelt delegates.

Chairman Rosewater ruled Hadley out of order. However, not to appear arbitrary, he granted each side twenty minutes to present their arguments.

Hadley Opens the Debate.

The assistant chief of police meanwhile got busy. The aisles were soon cleared. There was a pause while the representatives of the two sides crowded to the platform for the argument.

The injection of the big fight of the convention at its very inception pleased the delegates. As the thin, lithe, wiry Missourian began his fight there was another round of cheers.

When Governor Hadley finished his argument, ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey continued the debate for the Roosevelt forces.

When Fort finished, Congressman Sereno Payne of New York was yielded ten minutes by Watson and spoke in behalf of Taft.

United States Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts withdrew this afternoon his candidacy for the Republican National Committee. Three Massachusetts Roosevelt men were placed on convention committees. They are Charles S. Baxter, committee on credentials; A. G. Weeks, rules, and A. L. Nason, permanent organization.

Before the convention met Senator Borah announced that he would not be the Roosevelt candidate for temporary chairman. Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin was selected to lead the fight against Senator Root. This substitution of McGovern for Borah was part of the Roosevelt plan to capture the thirty-six La Follette votes.

Roosevelt threatened the Republican party with two conventions if the steam roller program of the National Committee was carried out.

This was his ultimatum, delivered as the vanguard of the great convention crowd was making its way to the Coliseum:

"Two conventions, if the seventy-eight delegates lawfully elected and instructed for me are excluded in the preliminaries of the convention, and if the seventy-eight delegates occupying seats stolen from me by the Republican National Committee are allowed to vote on temporary chairman."

This statement was made to Lawrence Y. Sherman, Martin B. Madden and John L. Hamilton, a committee named by the Illinois delegation, and get his approval of this plan of action in Roosevelt's behalf: "That no action shall be taken in any matter pertaining to the temporary organization of the convention that is not approved by 540 uncontested and untainted delegates."

The proposition was carried to the Taft camp, but the Taft leaders declared they would not accept it.

They proposed that the battle should go to a finish at today's session of the convention, that Roosevelt must either win by prosecuting Taft votes, submit to the steam roller, or bolt.

Roosevelt Plan Hits a Snag.

The first tactical victory of the day came to the Taft forces before the opening of the convention. Chairman Victor Rosewater of the National Committee informed the Roosevelt leaders that he would entertain no motion to revise the roll of the temporary organization. This meant that the Roosevelt plan to overturn the action of the National Committee could not be put to a test until the report of the Credentials Committee was put before the convention.

The National Committee had the convention hall at the Coliseum placed under a heavy police guard to prevent the laying of the foundation for a riot. Five hundred picked policemen, under command of Assistant Chief Schuettler, were at the building at daybreak, and so careful were they that no Rough Riders would be packed into the Arena that even every newspaper workers were refused entrance into the press section.

The martial array that guarded the convention hall, about which the crowds had already commenced to gather before the breakfast hour was over, was the result of an earnest plea made by Mayor Harrison by the Republican organization. The possibility of riot, and even of bloodshed, was placed before the chief executive of Chicago so strongly that he readily consented to place the organized and armed power of the city behind the duly accredited organization of the Republican party.

Mounted Police Cavalry.

With the full realization that they had one of the most difficult propositions of police duty ever placed before them, the higher officers gave orders to their men to use whatever force was necessary to stop trouble the moment it showed.

The police contingent came with arms swinging loose and ready. Aside from the 500 men in uniform, 100 policemen in plain clothes came trooping to the scene of the big political fight. A mounted section from the police cavalry cantered along in front of the building to aid in clearing the streets. To meet this unusual demand on the police power men were drafted from all of the city stations.

In addition strong reserve forces were held at neighboring stations ready to be rushed to the Coliseum in automobile and patrol wagons the moment the riot call was sounded. An emergency hospital was established in the Coliseum annex, and ambulance service was provided for the speedy rushing of any fray victims to the nearest hospital.

The early precautions seemed more to

Secretary Meyer Ill, But Is Not to Resign

George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, who is ill at his home in Hamilton, will return to Washington and resume his official duties as soon as his health permits.

This statement was made today by a member of Mr. Meyer's family. It was collected by the rumor from Washington that the secretary had decided to retire so as to be free to line up with Colonel Roosevelt in the Presidential fight.

The rumor was based on the secretary's absence from Washington. His illness was rumored, but a report that his furniture at Washington was being boxed up became current, and the word spread that he would not return to Washington.

The AMERICAN'S informant said today:

"Secretary Meyer is ill in bed here. A doctor and a trained nurse are in attendance. His illness is thought to be malaria, but has not sufficiently progressed for an accurate diagnosis.

"The Meyer home at Washington has not been closed. It is in charge of a housekeeper during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, but will be ready for them on their return.

"The report that he is to resign is therefore without foundation and absolutely false. Mr. Meyer and Mr. Roosevelt may be friends, but I know the secretary has no intention of resigning."

have been made for a battle than for a peace gathering of men coming together on an important state mission.

"Roosevelt or Riot!" is the battle cry of the Colonel's hosts. Here is the last statement from each side:

The Roosevelt forces—"We do not intend to be cheated out of our rights. If they want the sword, they shall have the sword!"

The Taft forces—"We intend to open and hold an orderly convention. If necessary, force will be used to preserve order. We will throw out disturbers—Colonel Roosevelt himself—if it seems best."

REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT KEYNOTE OF TAFT PLATFORM

CHICAGO, June 18.—The question of a platform was swallowed up in general interest today by the frenzy attending the opening of the fifteenth Republican national convention, but the platform makers were nevertheless quietly at work upon their various drafts.

That four platforms stood a chance of recognition was admitted by all. These were the declarations of principles of Taft, Roosevelt, La Follette and Cummins.

The Taft leaders are following these ideas in working out their planks:

1. Government by the people through representative institutions. 2. The constitutional guarantee of civil liberty to the individual. 3. The integrity and independence of the courts of justice as the sole protection of the weak against the strong.

These principles were presented by William Barnes, Jr., of New York, and his colleagues as the basis of the administration platform.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT PUTS IN BUSY MORNING WITH LIEUTENANTS

CHICAGO, June 18.—Colonel Roosevelt today ordered his lieutenants to force the fighting. The ex-President was in an aggressive mood when he went over the plans of battle with his lieutenants. Though he directed the movements of his brigade of delegates at the Congress Hotel, there were reports that he would personally appear at the Coliseum and lead the battle. Colonel Roosevelt was up shortly after 8 o'clock. He had a cold shower bath and had his breakfast served in his suite.

Immediately after eating he was in conference with leaders of his campaign. Senator Borah, Governor Hadley, Governor Johnson and Governor Stubbs reported and received their orders. Secretary Harper called at the colonel's quarters early with a huge stack of mail and telegrams that had come during the night. Long before there was any chance of the former President putting in an appearance at his campaign quarters, crowds began to gather.

Colonel Escapes Crowd.

Shortly before 10 o'clock Roosevelt was escorted from his private quarters to his business rooms. The colonel put one over on the waiting throng which had stood patiently a long time for just one look at him. Probably wishing to avoid being caught in a small riot and buffeted about in the centre of a flying wedge, an opportunity to make a dash down the corridors was awaited. The opportunity came when an announcement was made in the headquarters taking the attention of the crowd for the moment from the former President.

Roosevelt and his escort came down the corridor at a gait that was more a run than a walk, and the "hero of San Juan" was to his official suite before the crowd knew it.

There were cheers that equalled those on Monday in the Elizabethan room. There was much talk at the Roosevelt headquarters regarding the possibility of a visit to the convention by Colonel Roosevelt. The crowd was equally divided on the question. Some thought it would be a great mistake for him to go to the Coliseum, while others thought he should go.

After reaching his rooms on the eleventh floor of the hotel Roosevelt went at once into a discussion of general plans with leaders of his campaign. Among them were Colonel Cecil Lyon, William Flinn, Frank A. Munsey, Governor Johnson, Sidney Bieber, Senator Brixtow, Walter Brown, Frank B. Kellogg, George W. Perkins, George L. Record and H. L. Stoddard.

HARVARD IS GAY FOR CLASS DAY

Class Day at Harvard began at 9 o'clock today with Class Day exercises in Sanders Theatre. Throughout the day the yard was a gay place, and showering confetti filled the Stadium.

Prayer was offered by Professor George Herbert Palmer, '84.

The Class Day oration was read by Robert Wood Williams of Baltimore. Mr. Williams took the industrial situation for his theme. He recited the differences between capital and labor. He said the Socialist believed a social conflict inevitable. He condemned the Socialist as missing the point and deserving of no further study.

Taking up the "individualist" side of the situation, Mr. Williams said restriction of immigration would aid labor. Regarding the labor situation, he said:

It is the under-supply of capital and the over-supply of labor that makes the one ruler over the other, and causes the conflict. Mere railing against the capitalist class as useless to society, when society is willing to pay so generously for funds which the capitalist has saved, can lead to no lessening of the struggle. The rational remedy is to adopt measures that will increase the supply of capital and business talent and reduce the supply of labor, until the ratio between them is more nearly even, and they can bargain with each other on terms of equality.

To reduce the supply of labor, or at least to prevent its extraordinary increase, perhaps the most obvious way is to limit immigration. Every attempt to raise the position of the laborer in this country must prove ineffective so long as he must compete with an immigrant who is willing to work for a wage far below what is necessary to procure for the American the essentials of a decent living. A very decided restriction of immigration is fundamental if the causes of the conflict are to be removed. If this can be effected, the widespread facilities for education can have a much more effective influence in reducing the over-supply of untrained and unthinking manual laborers, by lifting a large part of the coming generation from this stock into the classes above, where the supply is relatively smaller and the pay much higher. By reducing the over-supply of unskilled labor, and increasing the supply of capital through constant economy and the processes of savings, the individualist is convinced that the conflict can be eliminated.

Class Poem Read.

The class poem was read by James Gordon Gilkey of Watertown. Mr. Gilkey took for his title: "The Builders," to whom he wrote eleven stanzas in musical metre. In the opening stanzas the class poet reviews the tremendous construction work in the cities. Then continues:

The world is but a city, built
By myriad hands and labor slow,
Where newer nations ever rise
And older orders pass and go.
And ever down the circling years
The world's great challenge echoes free,
And bids the souls that greatly dare
Rise up and build their visions fair
For nations yet to be.

Now hark—across that western sea
Come mingled sounds of death and birth,
Proud China, weak with countless years,

Has crumbled suddenly to earth.
Up from the dust quick nations spring
And on their weak foundations sway
While empire-builders shout for men—
One hand may mould a race again
And shape the East today.

These hills of ours where Pilgrim's knelt,
These streets where Patriot songs were
Now feel the tread of stranger's feet,
And echo to an alien tongue—
To us these later wand'rers come

With hoping heart and eager hand—
Our native builders waste away,
With them, we soon must shape today
A newer fatherland.

The Class Ode, written by George William Gray of Houston, Texas, was a pledge to the Lord and to Harvard:

Auto Crashes Into Carriage of Girl on Way to Her Wedding

Miss Dumaresq Soon After Becomes Bride of C. H. Whitney

MRS. CHARLES H. WHITNEY LEAVING LONGWOOD CHURCH TODAY ON THE ARM OF HER HUSBAND, AND AS SHE ENTERED THE CHURCH.

Miss Colette Dumaresq, Back Bay society girl and member of the Viscount Club, narrowly escaped injury while being driven to her own wedding this noon. The two-horse carriage containing the bride and one of her brothers, Philip Dumaresq, was in collision at the corner of Monmouth and St. Mary's streets with an automobile.

After a slight delay Miss Dumaresq proceeded to the Church of Our Savior in Longwood, where she became the bride of Charles Haudsyde Whitney.

The automobile, coming down St. Mary's street, which is a driving line between Boylston and Brookline, hit the bridal carriage on the right-hand side. William Brickley, who was driving, pulled his pair of horses sharply to the left. Spectators agreed that Brickley's quick work saved the carriage from being tipped over.

As it was, the collision was sufficient to bend the left forward mudguard on the auto to a shapeless mass, shatter the left side lamp and give the carriage and auto a severe jolt.

The front of the auto also hit the off horse of the pair on the right lining foot, nearly throwing the steed and causing it to plunge violently while Brickley was swinging the pair around.

Miss Dumaresq was as cool as though a carriage accident on the way to her bridal were part of a society girl's training. Hardly had the carriage righted itself than one of the doors was opened. The bride-to-be hopped out lightly, followed by her brother, and stood waiting on the sidewalk till the carriage was ready to go on. She did not seem the least disconcerted at finding herself standing on the sidewalk in her wedding gown and bridal veil, with interested spectators staring at her. Her color rose a little but she smiled reassuringly and was anything but nervous.

The automobile which halted the bride was numbered "Mass. 2516." This is the automobile registration number of Zenas Sears of No. 127 Kilsyth road, Brookline. The only occupant was the colored chauffeur.

Spectators said that the bridal carriage was heading in the right-hand side of Monmouth street, and that the auto was coming along the left-hand side of St Mary street.

A moment before the bridal carriage was at the preceding carriage, containing wedding guests, was almost in collision with an automobile at the same corner. Only sharp work averted an accident.

The bride, whose wedding program was so rudely interrupted, is the younger of the two daughters of Mrs. Sophie A. W. Dumaresq of No. 58 Bay State road. Their father, Philip K. Dumaresq, died recently. This bereavement caused the wedding to be quite modest and the number of guests to be limited.

After the accident Miss Dumaresq was driven along to the Church of Our Saviour in Longwood. There she was married at noon to Charles Haudsyde Whitney, son of Mrs. Jennie G. Perkins Whitney of Rockledge, Milton. Mr. Whitney is a Harvard '01 man and a member of the Somerset and Tennis and Racquet Clubs.

The marriage was performed by the rector of the Church of Our Saviour, the Rev. Reginald Heber Howe, D. D., in the presence of 500 guests.

The bride, who wore white satin with lace over-dress, with tulle veil, carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Lillian Dumaresq, as maid of honor, and was given away by her brother, Philip, the one who was in the carriage accident with her. Geoffry G. Whitney, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers, all Boston classmates of Mr. Whitney at Harvard, were Stanton Whitney, George Ames, Mark Hopkins and Henry Lyman. A reception followed at the Dumaresq home on Bay State road.

1912 HARVARD CLASS ODE SUNG TODAY AT CAMBRIDGE EXERCISES

The 1912 Class Ode, sung at the Harvard Class Day exercises in Sanders' Theatre, Cambridge, today, was written by George William Gray of Houston, Texas. The words are:

From the hills and the plains and the farthest shore,
From the valley and mountain and sea,
Thou hast gathered thy chosen and made them one blood
In their sonship, Fair Harvard, to thee.
Though the centuries change, though the nations pass,
Though the years beckon eager before,
Thou art ever enshrined in the hearts that look back
To behold thee, to bless and adore.

II.

In the thrill of our youth we believe in our might;
God keep it troubled and true!
In the ways thou hast stood, in the service of right;
To dream and to strive and to do.
All the joy of this day, all the hope of our heart,
In a pledge unto God and to thee
That we go in the shield and the armor of Truth,
In a faith that is reverent and free.

ALUMNI OF YALE HOLD FULL SWAY

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 18.—Yale alumni held the centre of the stage at the Commencement festivities here today, beginning with the general alumni gatherings this morning and continuing through the day with the Yale-Harvard baseball game, the class reunions and the many class dinners tonight.

A new feature of the commencement program was the meeting this morning for sessions and graduates under the auspices of the honorary scholarship societies of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi, the former an academic society and the latter of the Sheffield Scientific school.

The main object of the meeting was to discuss current university topics respecting scholarship and to explain the conditions to the graduates. Professor William Lyon Phelps presided and the speakers were Henry M. Lathrop of Shelton; Henry T. Addy, dean of the graduate school of the University of Minnesota, and Percival V. Bowen of Buffalo.

Announcement of honors and prizes was made by President Hadley.

James E. Sheffield of New York presided at the general alumni meeting which followed. President Hadley presented his report and speeches were made by Frederic Adams '82 of New York, Professor W. T. Sedgwick, '77 of the Massachusetts Institue of Technology, Bishop Benjamin Brewster '82 of Colorado, Walter P. Armstrong '06 of Memphis, Tenn., and others.

Various class reunions were held and the various classes marched in costume to the Yale-Harvard game.

ALUMNI GATHER FOR BROWN DINNER

PROVIDENCE, June 18.—The day's commencement festivities at Brown today included ceremonies and meetings at the men's and women's colleges. This morning the Phi Beta Kappa members met in the Administration building. The Ivy Day exercises at the women's college were the event of the morning. "The Magistrate," this year's Rock and Ruskin play, was presented at a matinee performance in the Providence Opera House. The Associated Alumni held their annual meeting and dinner in Lyman Gymnasium. The women graduates of this year had their reception at Pembroke Hall.

TUFTS HEAD SILENT ABOUT RESIGNATION

President Frederick W. Hamilton of Tufts College declined today to discuss the report that he is to resign to become superintendent of the Boston public schools, to take the place left vacant by the resignation of Stratton D. Brooks. Dr. Hamilton denied that he had already resigned, but declined to say whether or not he was contemplating severing his connection with the college.

COMMENCEMENT DAY AT BOSTON COLLEGE

285 GRADUATE AT WELLESLEY

Two hundred and eighty-five girls received the degree of Bachelor of Arts at Wellesley College commencement today. Fourteen candidates received the degree of Master of Arts. Twenty received certificates for their work in Hygiene and Physical Education.

Miss Gertrude Anna Streeter, 1912, received the Billings prize for excellence in the Composition and Theory of Music, and the Alice Freeman Palmer Fellowship was awarded to Bessie Marion Coats, Vassar, 1907, and Mary E. Ives, Fellow in Yale University, 1910-1911, now a candidate for the degree of Ph. D. at Radcliffe.

In Memorial Chapel.

The commencement exercises were held in the Houghton Memorial Chapel. The nave and transepts, except for the seats reserved for the Seniors, were crowded when the exercises opened at eleven o'clock. Musical selections opened the exercises. A march from Tannhauser, the Overture from Mignon and a Fantasia from Lohengrin were given by Kazrik's band. Professor MacDougall at the organ played the "Festal Prelude," and the academic procession entered.

In the procession were the officers of administration and instruction, the honor guests and recipients of honorary degrees and the senior class. The array of brightly colored academic gowns made a brilliant spectacle.

When the class was seated the invocation was sung, and then followed the reading of psalm 126 from the Malacchua bible.

The commencement address was delivered by Talcott Williams, Ll. D. He spoke on "The Motherhood of the State." There followed the presentation of the candidates for degrees.

Presentation of Prizes.

The candidates for the certificate of the department of hygiene were presented by Amy Morris Homans, M. A., director of the department. The candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts were presented by Angie Clara Chapin, M. A., Professor of Greek and Acting Dean of the college. Katherine May Edwards, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Greek and Comparative Philology acting for the committee on graduate instruction, presented the candidates for the degree of Master of Arts.

The Billings prize was announced. A hymn, the benediction and the organ postlude, the priest's march from Athalia, ended the exercises.

362 SMITH GIRLS RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

NORTHAMPTON, June 18.—Professor Bliss Perry of Harvard delivered the oration at the commencement exercises at Smith College today, speaking on "Individualism and Fellowship." The invocation was by President Emeritus L. Clark Seelye. Three hundred and sixty-two girls received diplomas. The honorary degree of Ph.D. was conferred on Myrtle M. Mann, Smith, 1908, of Winthrop.

PROBE FIFTH FIRE IN WELLESLEY BARN

The Wellesley police are today investigating the fifth attempt to burn the barn owned by George Barbie, a fruit dealer. The flames were rung in because of the fear that the flames would spread.

GOV. MEAD OF VERMONT OUT FOR SECOND PLACE

By ELIAS M'QUAID.

CHICAGO, June 18.—I have the honor to report that if the John Abner Mead boom for the vice-presidential nomination isn't sweeping everything before it, it is, at least, sweeping as much before it as is being vacuumed by any other little V. P. booms.

As a matter of fact, the market for vice-presidential booms is as weak as cambric tea. Governor Mead's headquarters is at the Auditorium, where the boys from Massachusetts are put up. The Auditorium is the Hotel Astor of these parts. The average man, if he could afford to take two or three rooms at the Auditorium would not care a fig who was Vice-President, or let alone who was merely nominated.

The Governor was a guest yesterday of the Hamilton Club, which has been entertaining one distinguished guest after another, and so the Mead headquarters were in the sole custody of Judge David H. Lamberton, one of the greatest political publicity men in the political publicity business.

Mr. Lamberton is so big and burly looking that the picture seems incomplete without the beautiful hotel you instinctively feel he ought to have back of him. Consenting to be interviewed, Mr. Lamberton got off this:

"Governor Mead is the strongest man on this hour of anybody mentioned for the nomination. That's the strongest way it can be put, although when you realize it, that means but little.

"As I see the situation, the fact is that if you nominate Mr. Taft, you have got to have a business man for Vice-President. If you nominate Colonel Roosevelt you nominate a man who is politically a Westerner, and you have got to come East for his mate.

"Look at New England today! Fighting ground, brother, fighting ground! Look at her, with three Democratic and three Republican Governors. I have been told the inside information is that Governor Foss will be nominated for Vice-President by the Democrats, and that New England at Baltimore will be sold for him. In such an event, New England will be a dangerous zone for Republicanism without a New Englander on the ticket."

Not to overlook a bet, Mr. Lamberton also considered Cummins.

"Suppose they compromise on Cummins," said he, "Governor Mead is Cummins's natural running mate, because he is in the place to represent Eastern business, and because he is also a fine figure of solid, ancient and honorable Republicanism.

So that, after all, there was just as much news from Mead headquarters yesterday afternoon as if the doctor had been on the job instead of delighting his audience at the Hamilton Club.

Between the readers of the AMERICAN and me, however, some of the delegates from Vermont say the fact is that the Green Mountain State sent over enthusiasm for either of two gentlemen who have suggested as possible successors to Senator Mead; that there is a strong feeling up yonder that the good old doctor should try another term, and that the doctor is out here because it pays to advertise.

"Bryan and Sewall" were on view at the Auditorium Hotel at the same hour. The "Bryan" meant is William J., about the only other reporter I found hard at work today. Brother Bryan was bustling in and out of different headquarters, taking the lay of the land and preparing to write a piece about it for his paper.

And the "Sewall" was Harold M. Sewall of Bath, Me., son of the Democrat who was Bryan's running mate in the free silver campaign of 1896. Harold M. Sewall is a State of Maine Republican. He was a visitor at Maine Headquarters.

The report that Governor Robert Perkins Bass of New Hampshire came out to the convention with the delegates from his State, or even on the same train or the same track with them, is denied by all concerned. The Governor is a guest at the Chicago home of his brother. He is one of the Progressive Governors who forced Theodore Roosevelt into this, after a manner of speaking, while the eight New Hampshire delegates are here under sealed orders to vote for William H. Taft—while the President is in the race, and after that, too.

Former Governor Charles M. Floyd of New Hampshire, one of the Granite State delegates-at-large, got here ahead of the delegation, and had a little dinner waiting for them at the Blackstone Hotel. One of the boys said today that it was a little dinner of fifteen courses. Even Chicago adults that the nobby Blackstone has never done better. There were seventeen, at table, including delegates, alternates and guests.

About nine-tenths of all the States are located at either the Auditorium or the Congress Hotels, both of which look out from their upper front windows into Lake Michigan. Side entrances to the hotels face each other across Congress street. They front on Michigan avenue which looks like a combination of Commonwealth avenue, Boylston street and Tremont street.

Across the asphalt from the hotels is a long but narrow plot of grass, maybe it's a park, and then the lake.

You can imagine what the neighborhood was all day Monday. Delegations with badges and loud voices, guilty bystanders without credentials but lender sympathy, brass bands, singing clubs and so on, and so on.

Only the New Hampshire delegation appears to have escaped.

Go to Michigan avenue for six blocks, turn four blocks to your left, and you come to the Lasalle Hotel, as beautiful as either of the others but far beyond the noise and brass band.

They say National Committeeman Fred W. Estabrook of Nashua picked the Lasalle for the Granite States, thereby qualifying as a picker. One New Hampshire man, however, has time and again wandered away from his room precincts of Lasalle street, to cope with the rough Roosevelt people of the Congress Hotel.

The bold'un is State Senator John Pender of Portsmouth, who likes nothing better than to wander into the midst of a Roosevelt crowd, declare that Taft is one of our greatest presidents and one of the most able men living in all history, and proceed to give the statistics.

Ten times yesterday one of the Congress House detectives had to coax Colonel Pender out of a Congress Hotel mob in order that the hotel might proceed about its regular business of being a hotel. "What State are you from, anyhow?" one rough neck asked the Portsmouth Senator. "New Hampshire," was the reply, spoken like a man.

"Hell," quoth the fellow in very fellow he was, this fellow. "Hell," says he, "We got Wards in Chicago bigger'n all New Hampshire.

"Well," said Colonel Pender, "that may all be, but I want to tell you that if it wasn't for the boys of New Hampshire there wouldn't be any Chicago. It was boys from the Little City I come from that stole the powder from the British, to be sent up to Boston and given to other New Hampshire boys, that saved Bunker Hill, and don't you forget that, young fellow."

Whereupon the house detective had to butt in again and tell the Colonel he was "wanted at the telephone." If it keeps up, they'll tell T. R. about John Pender, and then there'll be doings.

Every member of the Massachusetts party found an invitation in his box yesterday afternoon, bidding him accept the privileges of the University while doing his stay in Chicago. Louis Warner of Northampton, where all the good secretaries come from, is here to see that nothing happens to chill, dampen, obfuscate or defer the United States scrapbook boom of Congressman John Wingate Weeks. Mr. Warner, who is "John Weeks man," as the politicians classify the Warner kind of task, is flitting hither and thither asking Massachusetts visitors if they have been provided with everything they want, and, if they haven't, for goodness sake why haven't they asked about it before.

Our old friend, Isaac B. F. Allen, the only colored man ever elected to the Governor's Council in Massachusetts, bobbed up today in the midst of all the talk about the power of the sixty-six colored votes in the convention, and calling for the spot light, gracefully assumed the centre of the stage.

The Honorable Isaac is now a resident of either North New York or South Albany, residing, he says, in One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. He's in the real estate line. "I love Senator Crane just as much as ever," the Honorable Isaac said at the Auditorium, "but I love the United States more, and I am here as the confidential man of Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. George Manchester of New York. I am positively delighted almost to death to be able to say that we have already corralled twenty-three of the colored delegates, and I am confident that before five o'clock this afternoon I shall have five more. Allen was elected to the Executive Council by the votes of Boston, sway back in one of the Roger Wolcott years. The Democratic nominee was John H. Sullivan. As the politicians tell it, a great many Bostonians voted for Allen, supposing him to be uncolored.

For the most part the statesmen who are alleged to be for William H. Taft on here have made no arrangements whatever to meet the Roosevelt advertising, the Roosevelt brass bands and the Roosevelt "hurrah" boys. Here, and in the hotels, however, you do come across a card which reads: "Elihu Root is the ablest man in this country, in any position, on either side of the ocean, in my time." Of course, it was President Roosevelt who said this, and the card you see in the Chicago hotels doesn't forget to remind you of the fact. Thereby adding interest to the Roosevelt fight to keep Root out of the temporary chairmanship of the convention.

About the last of the States to be represented here was "Little Rhody." The folks from Rhode Island got in last evening, many hours behind their schedule. Governor Aram J. Pothier, came to Chicago with them. But not on politics. The Rhode Islanders, with their guests, were dined at the Blackstone by United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt, himself a delegate and chairman of the delegation. The dinner was "Taft" from beginning to end.

In addition to the Governor, the guests were Colonels Kennedy, Sansouci and Sherman of the Governor's staff; Governor's secretary, Edwin P. Poole, and the reading clerk of the Rhode Island Senate, Mr. David J. White, who will be one of the convention tally clerks. A. J. Wilcox, Sheriff of Providence County, was also of Rumford.

ROOSEVELT IN "A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM"

The actors in the Auditorium Theatre, Chicago, who surrendered their stage to Roosevelt last night, neglected to remove from the front of the house the huge electric sign reading "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which was to have been played. The Taft camp said viciously the sign was well fitted to the Roosevelt mass meeting and suggested that the Roosevelt three-sheets ought to read thus:

RETURN ENGAGEMENT

after an absence of four years of that unterrified favorite and protean actor

ROOSEVELT

now under the management for an indefinite term of Messrs. Perkins, Morgan, Dixon & Co.

TONIGHT

CHICAGO TO LODGE

By MORTON BIRGE.

The G. O. P. convention stands as one without a peer,
For many kinds of reasons it's politically queer,
And one new feature of it is we have not with us here
Henry Cabot Lodge.

Imagine a convention, and particularly this,
Where feeling is so frenzied ev'ry word is like a hiss,
And he is so forgotten they don't recollect they miss
Henry Cabot Lodge.

It used to be home different, that former frabjous time
When, like Haroun Al Raschid, he was in his golden prime,
And now they nominate without—it almost seems a crime—.
Henry Cabot Lodge.

He's probably in Washington, with many miles between Himself and where the fun is, but it doesn't seem to mean:

NOW A thing out here. Nobody asks: "Has anybody seen
Henry Cabot Lodge?"

THEN

HENRY CABOT LODGE

ARMED CAMPS AT COLISEUM

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Two hundred and fifty policemen, massed around the platform—a thousand deputies scattered throughout the convention hall—one hundred and fifty Pinkerton men distributed at equal distances over the Coliseum—

And these—God save the mark—are the conditions under which the once historic Grand Old Party of iron and order fronts its twenty-ninth and last convention, in this year of grace 1912.

Behold how good and glorious a thing it is to be a Democrat, and to meet in Baltimore.

The whole air is charged with feeling, and the apprehension of storm and riot.

There is scarcely a man of either side or of any status or class of whom does not confidently anticipate an opening of the convention in storm and protest, which may culminate in riot and bloodshed.

The Roosevelt men will start it, in an endeavor to capture the convention in the beginning. They are resolute, determined, sprinkled thick with gun-fighters and strong armed men, with stern Westerners and fiery Southerners. They are keyed to a high tension by a sense of injustice and outrage and bred to desperate determination by the spirit and record of the Rough Rider leader for whom they fight.

'TOPSY-TURVY' CRISIS IS DESCRIBED IN A LONDON NEWSPAPER

LONDON, June 18.—The Chicago correspondent of the Daily Mail, in attempting to describe the American political situation to its English readers, said:

It is impossible to draw any parallel to the existing situation from British political lines except by imagining an enormous coalition to say, between Mr. Lloyd-George and Mr. Asquith, for the nomination as the imperial candidate for the imperial throne.

Suppose the National Liberal Club was crammed with the rival Lloyd-George delegates and Asquith delegates, hailing from every part of the empire, with the balance of voting power controlled by fifty negroes from South Africa—and you get some idea of the topsy-turvy crisis in America.

DEBASING FIGHT, SAYS MINISTER

LONDON, June 18.—The Rev. John H. Jowett of New York, who is here on a holiday, has been interviewed on the American political situation. He said: "The personal controversy between President Taft and ex-President Roosevelt is lamented by every American citizen whom I have met. It is felt that public life is being seriously debased by their duel. On every hand I heard the opinion expressed that great problems were being forgotten in the personal aspects of this fierce controversy between two old friends."

LEWIS EXPECTS ROOSEVELT WIN

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

CHICAGO, June 18.—On the eve of battle I asked Borah, the Roosevelt captain-general, if, in event of Roosevelt's defeat, there would be a bolt and a third party. Borah was optimistic and noncommittal. "There is," said he, "no reason for facing such a proposition. I assure you in all candor and honesty that Colonel Roosevelt will be the regular nominee.

"Many," I urged, "fear a riot in the convention and bloodshed."

"Preposterous," exclaimed Borah. "There is no sense in such talk. It is one of the several war scares which the opposition in the heat of fancy has been busy getting up. You have seen earnest days in the House and Senate. The convention will come no nearer actual riot and actual bloodshed than did the House and Senate on the most earnest occasion."

To my many friends who wire me for information let me say that it looks to me like Roosevelt. I came here fresher than Roosevelt would win upon a principle and that anytime and anywhere I would back a warrior to win against a waiter blister.

Everything that has transpired since my arrival has strengthened that impression. The enthusiasm is on the side of Roosevelt. There is none on the side of Taft, where everyone and everything is as cold and pulseless as a wedge.

All of the Roosevelt people think he will win. Half of the Taft people believe Roosevelt will win. The other half fear it, cannot conceal their fears.

There are a ready great Roosevelt advantages. Roosevelt knows he has been robbed. The Taft people know they have robbed him.

The criminal is never courageous, while the victim is always ready to fight.

Roosevelt plans to force the battle from the very start and before the wavering Roosevelter can get rid of the revel, call a temporary chairman to take his place to shoulder the dreaded responsibility.

MERCHANTS BOOM JOHN WANAMAKER AS A COMPROMISE

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—An organization of the leading merchants and bankers of this city was formed today for the purpose of booming John Wanamaker as compromise candidate for the Republican nomination for President. This action followed the selection of the former Postmaster-General as compromise candidate by the Morgan-Stotesbury financial interests of Philadelphia and New York.

Ellis Gimbel and John Lit, the other two financial princes of Philadelphia, were the prime movers in the organization. The meeting was attended by more than 200 merchants and bankers.

Though the meeting was secret, it has been learned that plans were made for the nomination of Mr. Wanamaker in case President Taft cannot be, and one of William Penn's lieutenants was chosen to present his name.

DECIDE DOCK PROBLEM SOON

The question as to whether or not the New Haven Railroad will give up its lease of the Commonwealth docks is now up to President Mellen. As soon as the head of the New Haven system gives his answer to the Directors of the Port of Boston it will be placed before the Governor's Council for action. The lease can be abrogated by decision of the Council.

General Hugh Bancroft, director of the port, today declared that the story printed in the AMERICAN saying that the directors had talked the matter over with the New Haven officials was true in every particular. General Bancroft said, also, that he believed the New Haven president would agree to the abrogation of its lease on the docks, and not ask a lease of State lands near the foot of C street in South Boston, as was originally suggested.

When the Directors of the Port met with the New Haven official and talked over the matter, the matter of rates was brought up and the railroad men given to understand that they must be reasonable and satisfactory to the Boston merchants.

General Bancroft said today:

"It is true, as stated in the AMERICAN, that the New Haven road signified to the directors its willingness to insure, so far as the New Haven and Boston & Maine roads are concerned, the same freight rates for goods forwarded for shipment to and from the Commonwealth docks as are now fixed from the Charlestown docks.

"There are few details regarding rates, however, that President Mellen wished time to consider and so we have left the matter in his hands until he can talk it over more thoroughly with his directors. We expect an answer before long, however. The directors of the port are anxious to get to work on improving and developing Commonwealth docks, as they will greatly increase the business of the port. We have the promise of several large steamship companies that, if suitable docks were provided they gladly would send their ships to this port.

For this reason we have been especially anxious to get to work and provide the docks wanted.

"The docks will be a great thing for Boston, and as soon as we hear from President Mellen we will get a move on. We won't waste any time in discussing it much further, but just put it before the Governor and his council for action. That is all we need to do, you know. I don't think that we will have any difficulty in getting it through then."

HUNT FOR MAN WHO STABBED PATROLMAN

Patrolman Patrick Toland of the Charlestown station is at his home, No. 21 Bainbridge street, South Boston, suffering from a severe stab wound in the back, while other policemen are hunting his assailant. With Patrolman D. A. Shea, he was arresting Peter Morella, twenty-one; James Spinner, thirty, and Augustus Spinello, thirty, charged with assault on some unknown person, at the corner of Tremont and Chelsea streets, Charlestown. He had just seized one of the prisoners when some person, whose identity is not known, attacked him. Toland held on to his prisoner until the patrol arrived.

WRIGHT REFUSES TO GIVE UP FLYING

NEW YORK, June 18.—In spite of the wishes of his millionaire friends on the directorate of the Wright Company, Orville Wright will continue to fly whenever he wishes. He came to New York, was elected president of the company, smilingly told the directors his decision and stole out of the city. Cornelious Vanderbilt, Theodore P. Shonts, Andrew Freedman, August Belmont and other directors of the Wright Company, believed it would be better for aeronautical science if Orville Wright would pledge himself not to fly any more.

FRENCH DIRIGIBLE GOES UP 9,925 FEET

PARIS, June 18.—A world's record for altitude for dirigible balloons was made today by the scout dirigible Conte, an airship belonging to the French army, which attained a height of 9,925 feet. The altitude record of dirigible balloons has hitherto been held by the French military dirigible Adjutant Reau, which on December 7, 1911, ascended to 7,053 feet.

FIRST DIVORCE FOR CHINESE IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 18.—What is said to be the first Chinese divorce suit in this State came to light when the complaint in the action of Mrs. Lillian James Lee against Lee Hoo Soon was filed in the county clerk's office. She says she married the defendant in this city on October 14, 1909, and that there are no children. She charges that Lee Hoo Soon was too friendly with Yok Gee.

GRAY HAIR

Easy to Restore Natural Color of Your Hair by Simple Method

Science has just been finding out some of the most amazing things about the hair—discoveries that overturn many old ideas.

For instance, with a newly discovered product the natural color is restored by a simple treatment that can be applied by any one in a short time. This scientific treatment is embodied in the Queen Gray Hair Restorer, a liquid preparation that makes any desired shade from the one package, leaving the hair soft and fluffy, and making a lasting color that is not sticky and does not rub off.

The Queen Gray Hair Restorer is instantaneous in its effect and, besides, but one application is needed to restore the natural color of your hair. It is in two sizes, one and $1.00, each can be obtained from Houghton & Dutton and Blake-Jarnes Drug Co. and the leading drug and department stores throughout the country.

The best hairdressers use it and sell it to their patrons.

WHAT IS SHE DOING NOW?

What is she doing, readers?

She's doing SOMETHING.

Yes, but just WHAT is she doing?

Everybody has three guesses! But they must be sent in before Thursday, June 20, at 9 p. m.

The prizes are $100 in cash and 267 copies of Tad's famous Silk Hat Harry Books, handsomely bound and illustrated profusely with Tad's best work.

Don't be afraid to guess! YOUR postcard may bring you a nice $50 check for a vacation present.

This man got $15 last week for his postcard. Hear what he says:

Springfield, Mass., June 13, 1912.

Gentlemen—I beg to thank the Boston AMERICAN for the prompt remittance of the prize I was astounded to find I had won.

I shall be glad at any time to testify to the AMERICAN'S promptness, courtesy and generosity in such matters. Sincerely yours,

ERNEST N. BAGG,
Teacher in Journalism, etc., Home Correspondence School, Springfield, Mass.

All you have to do is to study today's picture carefully and make up your mind what the woman is doing. The more you think about it the more different things you will think of what she may be doing.

Write briefly on a postcard your three best guesses and mail to THREE BEST GUESSES, care Sunday AMERICAN, P. O. Box 2047, Boston, Mass.

One hundred dollars in money prizes and 267 book prizes will be awarded for the cleverest answers.

First prize, $50.00; second prize, $15.00; third prize, 5.00; fourth to thirty-third prizes, $1.00 each; thirty-fourth to three hundredth prizes, each a copy of Tad's Bound Book.

Winners will be announced in next Sunday's AMERICAN, June 23.

Several hundred of the best winning guesses will also be published.

FIND LOOT STOLEN FROM FREIGHT CARS

TAUNTON, June 18.—Stolen goods valued at more than $2,000 were recovered by railroad detectives and police in a raid on several tenements on Whittenton and Lawrence streets which was begun shortly after midnight and was not completed until after 3 o'clock this morning. The goods recovered included fur coats and garments, muslin, scrim curtains, silk stockings and other apparel. According to the railroad detectives, freight cars have been repeatedly robbed of late, the losses amounting to thousands of dollars.

MANILA, June 18.—The first president of the first leper republic in the world is an American citizen named Michael Wallin, the only American leper on the island of Culion, in the Philippines, who was today elected chief executive of the republic the Philippine government has organized to manage the affairs of the leper colony.

"Why Don't You Ring Fares?" Leads to Row

Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court today said that when an Elevated conductor fails to ring up fares in his car, it is perfectly proper for a passenger to ask him this question.

"Why don't you ring up the fares paid you?"

The case which called for this ruling from the judge was charges made against gray-haired Asa S. Mitchell, of No. 45 Clark street, Somerville, that he assaulted and beat William J. Murphy, a strike-breaker employed as a conductor on a City Point car. Mrs. Mitchell, wife of the defendant, appeared as a witness for her husband. Both told the same story.

"We had been visiting a son of ours in South Boston," Mr. Mitchell told Judge Fallon. "We got on Murphy's car as friends and I asked the strike-breaker Murphy to ring up our fares. He put the money in his pocket but made no move to ring up the fares.

"Why don't you register the fares I said once I asked him.

"It's none of your business, he retorted. What is more, I'm boss of this car, and if you don't stop hunting in I'll knock you off my car.

He called a policeman who refused to arrest me. Later at the Broadway and Dorchester street transfer station Murphy approached me with the same remark, and I, controlling myself with my hand. Then both grabbed me. I defended myself, I admit. I used my fists. They pulled me off the car and had me arrested.

After hearing the testimony Judge Fallon dismissed the charge against Mitchell making a statement in which he completely exonerated the gray haired man.

VAST COLISEUM CROWDED EARLY

COLISEUM, CHICAGO, June 18.—Amid a clattering of hammers before an audience of newspaper men and policemen, the final preparations for the Republican Nation Convention were completed today. Standing on the platform where a few minutes later an historic political fight was to be staged, Colonel William F. Stone, sergeant-at-arms for the National Committee, personally superintended the final touches and gave final directions.

The great hall, transformed into a theatre-like audience room, was empty except for the few scattered workmen and the police. Bluecoats and brass buttons were everywhere. One might almost think that blue and brass was part of the decoration scheme, for it was only a little less prominent than the tri-colored bunting that formed a brilliant background.

Big Police Equipment.

The Coliseum Annex, where the offices of the National Committee are located, were turned into an improvised barracks. Policemen in platoons were drawn up under their commander, Assistant Chief Herman F. Schuettler. Then the men were led to their stations. The first line filed in a long line in front of the platform and the speakers' stand. Twenty-seven men were placed there. They were commanded by Captain O'Brien, who detailed officers to the National Committee when it was learned that William Flinn of Pittsburgh was coming to Chicago. These men were placed as a possible buffer between delegates and the stands should trouble start.

Other officers were sent to their stations in the hall, on the tacit admission by the committee that they feared actual physical disturbance as a result of the heat of the bitter fight between Colonel Roosevelt and President Taft had engendered.

Ready for Great Crowd.

Then came the 1,200 assistant sergeants-at-arms. They filed the aisles and stood ready to handle the crowd that waited impatiently in the street outside. In a balcony high up over the rear of the building a band impatiently sounded subdued bars of the music they soon would ogle. While the banners still cluttered, E. W. Sorrel of the Sixth Louisiana district, who had been steam rolled into the convention by the national committee, bucked the police line outside and forced his way into the building. He was the first delegate on the floor, and he looked lonesome as he waited under the standard of his State.

Captain Harry S. New, chairman of the National committee sub-committee on arrangements, was the first of the notables to join Colonel Stone on the platform. The Indiana committeeman, hands in pockets and hat well back on head, strolled in the front of the platform, glanced about and smiled as he saw the police patrol.

By 10 o'clock the first few stragglers had found their way through the Annex and had made their way into the building. Newspaper men were allowed to enter and took their places in the seats allotted on the platform. The band struck up, thought better of it and quit. The doors were thrown open and a few minutes after 10 o'clock the waiting throng crowded forward and the first troubles of the sergeant-at-arms began.

Police Have Hands Full.

Colonel Stone, his coat and hat laid aside and his sleeves rolled up, stood at the very front of the speakers' platform and shouted his orders to his assistants to keep the aisles clear.

The assistants, none too familiar with the arrangements of the seats, were slow in finding the chairs the tickets called for and the crowd in the aisle crowded forward. The police had their first work then. Part of the first guards were sent to shove back the struggling invaders. For a time it looked as though the steam roller would be incapable of accomplishing the task, but finally the officers prevailed and the people were forced back in their chairs. By fifteen minutes after ten fully 1,000 persons had been admitted. Seeing this auspicious moment the band leader turned his neatly pressed coated back to the audience and the musicians crashed into the strains of "America."

By the time that the band had rippled through half a dozen popular airs, the hall began to fill rapidly. The policemen who had been lounging during the wait before the hall was open rose to their feet and formed a line.

Rosewater Enters.

William Hayward, secretary of the National Committee, was the third committee officer who reached the platform. He glanced about the building and took a chair well back on the platform. Chairman Rosewater then took his seat at the massive oak table at the front of the stage. An assistant sergeant-at-arms came in and placed a massive new gavel, a silver pitcher and a silver cup on the table. The officers of the committee posed for another picture, Stone still in his shirt sleeves holding the gavel.

William Barnes, Jr., of New York, came in with a part of the delegation from his State. He stood talking earnestly to them for a few moments.

By 10:45 the main floor had been half filled. The delegates disregarded directions to keep out of the aisles and stood in groups talking.

The galleries filled more slowly. At 11 o'clock not a third of the gallery seats had been filled.

Frederick Upham, chairman of the local committee on arrangements, entered about 11 o'clock. He went to a private box where he entertained Mayor and Mrs. Carter Harrison. Others in the party were J. Sloat Fassett, Winfield T. Durbin, former Governor of Indiana and Mrs. Durbin, Mrs. William Hayward, wife of the secretary of the national committee; Alexander Revell, chairman of the Roosevelt national committee and Mrs. Revell, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles Nagel and Mrs. Nagel, Mrs. Clark E. Deneen, wife of the Governor of Illinois; Mrs. Chauncey Dewey, wife of Roosevelt's Illinois campaign manager; Secretary to the President Charles Hilles and Mrs. Hilles, Postmaster-General Hitchcock and Mrs. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, wife of Congressman Lowden.

An Ovation to Fairbanks.

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the colonel, gained admission to the convention and was allowed the freedom of the floor.

Former Vice-President Fairbanks was given the first ovation as he entered the hall.

It was 11:25 before the first feeble cheer for any candidate was given. The demonstration was an feeble that those outside the section of the gallery where the cheering started could not tell what candidate was cheered.

By 11:30 the confusion had grown into a hum of a great gathering. The spectators flowed into the gallery in streams while most of the delegates had already reached the floor. They stood in the aisles crowding and jostling good-naturedly.

Mrs. Longworth Bows.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of Colonel Roosevelt, with her husband, was one of those who arrived early. She was dressed in her favorite blue. She smiled and bowed acknowledgement to a host of acquaintances.

Shortly before time to call the convention to order, the California delegation entered. They unfurled two golden silk banners bearing the motto:

"California for Roosevelt by 77,000."

The banners were greeted with a rousing cheer.

W. A. Johnstone carried one of the California banners. He stood on a chair and waved it violently. Meanwhile the band played in a muffled undertone "Everybody's Doing It."

The two Taft men "steam-rolled" into the delegation did not enter the hall with their fellows.

Seats were left vacant for them. They had not arrived within fifteen minutes of noon.

When the California display had been reduced until only a golden grizzly bear perched on the top of a golden pole grinned down at the delegates, the Massachusetts delegates essayed a little rooting. The Taft men smiled. Just then the band struck up "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Ten minutes before time for the convention the hall was crowded.

"William Barnes of New York wants two conventions," declared E. R. McCormick of the Illinois delegation as the Illinois men gathered.

"I saw him at 3 o'clock this morning and asked him if New York would agree to stand by the nominee who musters 540 delegates. This he refused to do and declared he would not agree to anything. He would rather have two conventions.

Lawrence Y. Sherman, who appeared in his seat early, declared:

"Illinois stands fifty to eight against Elihu Root. We are fifty-six for Roosevelt and we are going to stand."

Illinois Delegation May Break.

Others in the delegation were not so sure. It was declared that if the balloting gets by the first ballot, Illinois will go to pieces and probably thirty of the total fifty-eight will go to Mr. Taft.

William J. Bryan excited curious interest when he entered. He entered the press stand and sharpened his pencil for his newspaper task. Mrs. Bryan sat by his side.

A. M. Stevenson, who sat near the throttle of the steam roller in the National Committee, was early on the ground. He occupies a delegate's seat in the Colorado delegation. He was sure there would be no more than a parliamentary riot. He was not far from where a member of the press stand and sharpened his pencil for his newspaper task. Mrs. Bryan sat by his side.

A. M. Stevenson, who sat near the throttle of the steam roller in the National Committee, was early on the ground. He occupies a delegate's seat in the Colorado delegation. He was sure there would be no more than a parliamentary riot. He was not far from where a member of the press delegation arose and furnished three cheers for Roosevelt.

This early local enthusiasm did not arouse much response nearly. This sort of cheering was spasmodic, there being too much confusion caused by the arrival of the delegations.

Victor Rosewater arrived early and took a place on the platform. At 12:01 o'clock Chairman Rosewater beat the gavel and the convention was called to order.

11 FIRE WAGONS FOR LITTLE AUTO BLAZE

Eleven pieces of fire apparatus were called out early today to extinguish a slight fire under the hood of an automobile at Washington and Water streets. All that was required, however, was the service of one little chemical tank, which worked for two minutes.

$250,000 WAGERED ON THE CANDIDATES AT BIG CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 18.—Bets aggregating $250,000 have been placed here on the result of the Republican convention. This is the estimate of a gambler who has himself handled over $50,000 in wagers from Easterners.

While, in a few cases, odds have been given that Roosevelt would win, the betting is really even money as between Taft and the Colonel.

La Follette, Cummins and other dark horses are quoted at anywhere from 10 to 20 to 1.

Jim O'Leary, veteran local gambler, is said to have received more than $100,000 to bet on the result, most of which is already gone. Roosevelt money is said to be the bulk of this sum.

BURLEIGH WINS MAINE PRIMARY

PORTLAND, Me., June 18.—Edwin C. Burleigh of Augusta, a former Congressman, is the Republican nominee for Senator, and William T. Haines of Waterville is the Republican choice for Governor, according to primary returns today from 449 cities and towns out of 521 in the State. The vote from 449 cities and towns gave Burleigh 16,011; Herbert M. Heath of Augusta got 9,836, while Frederick Powers of Houlton received 6,248.

In the governorship race 447 towns and cities out of 521 gave Haines 21,213; Frederick E. Boothby of Portland, 5,022, and Albert H. Shaw of Bath, 6,060.

Missing from this count are Portland, Brewer, Eastport, Fryeburg and Vassalboro. It is not expected that the returns from these places will change the result.

At the first primary ever held in the State, and the first primary in New England to express a preference for United States Senator, the Republicans cast about half their party strength.

Governor Plaisted and United States Senator Gardener were renominated by the Democrats.

SELECT MANY COMMITTEEMEN

CHICAGO, June 18.—Members of the new Republican National Committee were selected at caucuses of the various State delegations in meetings through yesterday and last night. 'What's Matter With Kansas?' at Chicago

William Allen White's There, to Say Nothing of Borah, Hadley, Stubbs, and a Few More Kansans.

William Allen White, author of the original cry: "What's the matter with Kansas?" is one of the Roosevelt fighters at the big gathering. Mr. White may ask himself his famous question regarding the convention. If he does he can answer:

"There's nothing the matter with Kansas this party. Look at us!"

For among those present are:

United States Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Roosevelt choice for temporary chairman—graduate of the UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS.

Governor Herbert E. Hadley of Missouri, Roosevelt floor leader—native of KANSAS, graduate of UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS, '92.

United States Senator Joseph Little Bristow of KANSAS, Roosevelt leader.

And

William Allen White of KANSAS, who is hustling for KANSAS when he isn't hustling for Roosevelt.

SETTLEMENT HOUSE MEET

Once more Bunker Hill day has come and gone and the youths of Boston are filled with renewed patriotism that will last until July Fourth, if not longer. Horribles, noise and parades marked the day, together with all-night larks that sent a sleepy lot of boys to their work this morning.

Over in Wood Island Park seventy-five young athletes fought a battle when five settlement houses met for their annual athletic struggle. Representatives were there from Denison House, Hale House, South Bay Union, Roxbury League and Ellis Memorial. The meet was divided between the juniors and seniors, but all points were added to make the total.

Roxbury League won with a total of 54 points and Hale House was second with 52. The other houses stood as follows: Denison House 31½, Ellis Memorial 12 and the South Bay Union 11½. There were many in the meet who deserve especial mention, not so much for records broken, as for the credit due boys and young men who have sacrificed time and pleasure of another sort for the purpose of developing themselves physically. Many of the boys who won points for their respective houses yesterday work long hours and get little time to attend gymnasium classes. This is especially true of the Roxbury League boys. In several events the league took two or three places and oftentimes against boys who have had the advantage of high school training.

In the mile run splendid form and judgment was shown by Silas Grain and Mike Shields, both Roxbury League boys, who got first and second places by a remarkable burst of speed on the last lap when they shot by Greenbaum of Hale House, who had been leading.

Among the juniors Max Bikoffski of the Hale House distinguished himself in half a dozen events, the most notable of which was the 100-yard dash, in which he easily outdistanced all others. James Arbid a young syrian from Denison House, gave promise of a future record breaker by making a running broad jump of nineteen feet, nine inches. He also won the running high jump. Robert Simmons of the South Bay Union surprised his friends by capturing the 440-yard junior race.

NEW SENDS COLONEL 10 CONVENTION SEATS

CHICAGO, June 18.—Ex-President Roosevelt sent a courteous note to Colonel Harry S. New, chairman of the sub-committee of arrangements for the convention, stating his family had no seats for the convention, and asked for ten tickets. Colonel New promptly inclosed the ten tickets to Colonel Roosevelt. It turns out that Colonel New had set aside those tickets all along for Colonel Roosevelt.

DIRECTORS TO HEAR TODAY DEMANDS OF PHONE GIRLS' UNION

The demands of the phone girls' union for increased pay and changes in their working conditions will be considered, it is expected, at the monthly meeting of the board of directors of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, held today.

The propositions of the operators were to be presented through Jasper N. Keller, president of the board. Mr. Keller was not sure that he would bring up the matter. Members of the board have not as yet discussed the situation and have formed no opinions.

The operators expect that the changes they are working for, especially the abolition of the "split trick" system, an irregular arrangement of working hours, will be looked upon favorably.

ALWAYS SUSPECT YOUR STOMACH

Do Not Be Fooled by Misleading Symptoms.

If your digestion is out of order you may have symptoms that will mislead you into thinking you have heart disease, kidney trouble, some nervous or blood disorder. Better look to the stomach first. It is here that the blood gets its nourishment. If the digestion is disordered, the blood will be out of order. Poor digestion fills the blood with poisons. This impure blood poisons every tissue of the body. The dyspeptic awakes in the morning with a dull, heavy head and is irritable, melancholy, and dizzy because the brain, nerves and muscles have been poisoned from the stomach.

Mrs. W. F. Raullard, whose address is R. F. D. No. 1, West Kennebunk, Me., says: "I tried two doctors and both failed to help me. I had a bad stomach and did not think I would ever get well. My stomach would pain me severely at times, which I believe was due to gas forming on it. Sometimes my food would cause sour stomach. My liver was torpid. I had palpitation of the heart and if I walked fast my heart would beat rapidly and I would get all out of breath. I had hot flashes all over my body. I was extremely nervous and if excited would tremble like a leaf and have no control over my actions. Towards the last when I was so sick, my head ached over the eyes affecting the sight. I had frequent spells of weakness and would have to lie down and rest. I had neither strength nor ambition and did my work indifferently. I lost greatly in weight. I had been a sufferer several years when a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People because they had helped her and I began to take them. It is wonderful how they helped me. I soon felt better and was so pleased that I continued their use until I was cured. I am willing to tell anyone of my cure and have recommended the pills to many people."

A new edition of the booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat," is free on request. Send a postal for it to-day and begin to cure yourself by following the directions it contains.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Convention Sidelights

CHICAGO, June 18.—William A. Adams, now one of Chicago's leading lawyers, called on the New Hampshire outfit today to see if there mightn't be an old Manchester roommate in the lot. Another such visitor was Dean Walter Sumner, advocate of eugenic marriage.

The mammoth electric sign out in front of the Auditorium Theatre in Congress street, where Colonel Roosevelt spoke, almost at the door of the convention hotels, had been all arranged for a magnificent spectacle in aid of the Women's Hospital. According to the glass letters, the show was to have been "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Mr. Roosevelt saw no bad omen in the fact that he took the place and the the advertising of a dream.

Admission to the Roosevelt theatricals was by ticket only. One hundred policemen guarded the approaches. The crowd began to gather two hours before Colonel Roosevelt began to speak.

Some of the able young gentlemen who look out for Colonel Roosevelt's publicity for him appear to have forgotten, if they ever heard it, the good old saying that "after the nomination there has got to come an election."

Many transparencies carried by the unorganized Roosevelt shoulders for last night's show must have been offensive to every friend of President Taft, and every friend of a Taft National Committeeman. Imagine this one, for instance:

"Stealing delegates in a blacker crime than stealing horses, and you know what they do to horse thieves."

And then there was a verse in the official (printed) song. This is how it ran, and you will see that it ought to help Roosevelt carry Massachusetts, perhaps:

"O Nation of men who are mighty,
"Of women kind-hearted and true,
"The men that you want for a leader,
"Stands ready, 'tis now up to you.
"What say you of Barnes and his thunder?
"What of Crane and his Gagglechein crew?
"Those discredited pirates, who plunder
"And steal your free birthright from you?"

United States Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire, about whom Mr. Roosevelt has spoken sharply on the stump, arrived yesterday and is put up at the fashionable Blackstone, where reside George W. Perkins, John Hays Hammond and others of the great.

La Follette, Cummins and other dark horses are quoted at anywhere from 10 to 20 to 1. Odds of 10 to 7 have been given that Roosevelt would be nominated on the third ballot.

The bets on the result of the convention, placed in Chicago, easily reach $200,000. This was the estimate of a well-known gambler who has handled nearly $50,000 in wagers from his Eastern city, though odds in some cases have been given that Roosevelt would get the nomination, the betting on the two big candidates stood at about even money.

Samuel J. Elder of Boston, classmate of President Taft, in Chicago as an attorney, advising in the handling of the contests, was asked:

"How happens it that some of the cases upon which Roosevelt personally had laid the greatest stress were thrown out of the committee on a unanimous vote, when it is known that the Roosevelt men are determined to support every Roosevelt contention?"

"It's like that little incident down in Virginia," he said. "The term of the old county judge was about to expire and he was a candidate for renomination. One of the younger lawyers, long ambitious to succeed him, announced that he would come out against him. The old judge sent for the young lawyer. 'Let me serve one term more,' he pleaded. 'I'll make it my last term, and then, if you are still ambitious to mount the bench, I'll aid you all I can to realize your ambition.' The argument did not avail. The young lawyer remained obdurate. The judge made one more appeal. 'Support me this time,' he said, 'and as long as I'm on the bench I'll decide every case you have before me in your favor.'

"The argument was too strong to resist. The lawyer withdrew from the case; the judge was renominated and re-elected. Not long after that the lawyer appeared in a cause before him. The decision was against him. He was furious and called the judge to account for it. 'Didn't you and I make a bargain?' he demanded, angrily. 'Didn't I withdraw from the fight on condition that every case I had would be decided in my favor?'

"'That's quite true,' said the judge.

"'Then why did you decide against me?'

"'Because you had no case.'

You can draw your own deductions and moral from that little yarn," Mr. Elder concluded.

Senator "Joe" Dixon was surprised to receive a call at his headquarters in the annex from his wife and five daughters—all under fourteen. (That is, the daughters are under fourteen.) When shown that there can't be any race suicide crank get anything on Roosevelt for the fatherliness of his chief promotor.

"This reminds me," said Dixon, "of the story they tell out in my county about a ranchman and his wife and twenty-five children going to the circus. In a side-show was a giraffe, which the spieler on the box announced could be seen for ten cents a head. The ranchman approached.

"'I've got my wife and twenty-five children with me,' he said, 'and I'd like to get reduced rates.'"

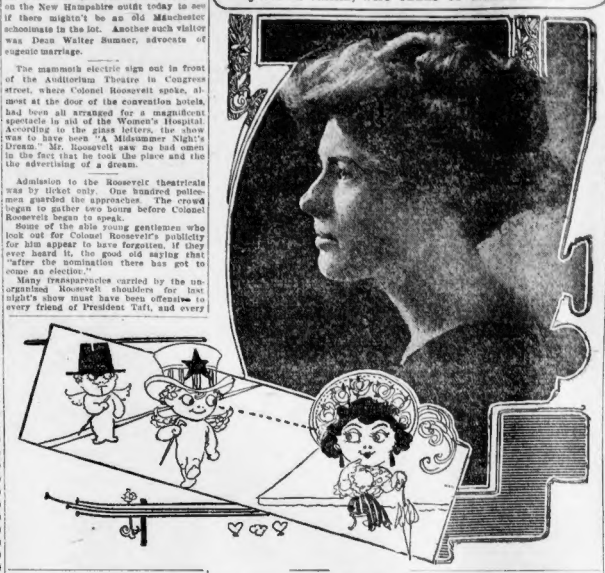
E. F. Stoddard is a man of huge dimensions. He hails from New Hampshire, and is one of the attaches of the National Committee. His magnificent proportions led some of the newspaper artists to regard him as a man of corresponding prominence. He was sketched, and the result was submitted to him.

"How do you like it, Senator?" he was asked.

The artist had taken him for Senator Penrose. Stoddard unselfishly acknowledged his identity, and now he wonders why that picture has never been printed.

"Model's Life Is a Battle" "Her One Friend the Artist"

JEAN M. CLARE, WHO TELLS OF MODEL'S LIFE



Jean Clare, Posing to Earn Musical Education, Tells of Trials and Compensations.

The artist's model lives a life of fighting—fighting to keep her head above the waves of suspicion which threaten to engulf her at any moment.

When seen on the artist's canvas by the critical public, she is pronounced beautiful, but in real life people say "she is only an artist's model."

Her one friend is the artist. If she is weary from long standing, he sees it, and is ever willing to stop his work. There is a bond of sympathy between the artist and the model, and the model knows that she can always turn to him in times of trouble.

These are the observations of Jean M. Clare, who is studying music, and to pave her way in the musical world has become an artist's model. Said Miss Clare:

Few people know what the life of a model is. Her only true friends are the artists for whom she poses. They realize just what her position is. They realize that but for the model their success in life would be nothing. The artist is always kind, though insistent. He is sympathetic and just.

What a difference between him and the public at large. The lives of many models are made miserable by the critical public. If these people would only try to understand that there is a vast difference between the American model and the Parisian model.

The true type of American model is more reserved than any other girl in any other profession. People say the work is easy and the model makes good wages. I have stood in one position three or four hours without even moving a muscle. I have kept up this pose for a week.

When my work has been completed at night I have been so weary, so exhausted, that I could hardly drag one foot after the other. Is that easy work? We do get fairly good pay, but we sacrifice much for these extra few dollars.

Many people believe that if a girl has a pretty figure and a handsome face that is all she needs. That is not so. The first thing that an artist looks for is expression. An artist can paint a beautiful face, but it is hard to catch a natural expression. That is what he wants.

She must have tact and confidence in herself to please the artist. Without this her aspirations are hopeless. She must be reserved and she will hold the respect of the artist. The honor and respect that the true American artist has for women is beautiful.

Of course, some artists fall in love with their models. It is a strange situation. The artist may be the most successful in the land. He may be painting what he calls his masterpiece. His model is before him, his canvas is upon the easel.

The painting may be partly completed when, like the rush of a tidal wave, he realizes that he is in love—in love with his model. He may just as well lay the canvas one side. It will never be his masterpiece. It will not even equal some of his other paintings.

It is seldom that one hears of an artist using his wife for a model. No matter if her expression and figure is perfect—love breaks down the barrier of his aspirations.

I am just fascinated with the work. Of course I am a mere nothing, as far as that goes. My head, my shoulders or my expression may create a masterpiece for the artist. When it is completed my work is done. The artist appreciates what I have done. The public gaze at the painting and say, "exquisite," "beautiful," but the poor model and her long hours of standing in a difficult position is never thought of. But I love the work just the same.

I am just getting enough money by posing to perfect my musical education. Posing will not be my life work. You know the artist's model is short lived. That is, her expression may change and her figure is not the same.

GETS DIVORCE FACTS FOR HER DAUGHTER

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 18.—Mrs. A. J. Mason, wife of a leading confectioner of Rochester, has obtained a divorce for her daughter, Edith Terry Grabb, from Frank F. Grabb. She testified that she went to Lynn, Mass., on August 24, 1911, got a room adjoining her son-in-laws, at No. 90 Ayerson street, and watched him.

H. G. TIERNEY HAS TRIED TONA VITA

Boston Man Says It Is Best He Has Ever Taken.

The following statement was made to one of the clerks in a leading Boston drug store by H. G. Tierney, living at 928 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston:

"During the past winter I became greatly run down, and my condition worried both my family and myself. I tried many preparations and tonics, but none seemed to benefit me. My entire system was in a deplorable condition and my nights' rest was nothing short of a horrible nightmare. Finally on the advice of one of the clerks in a local drug store I tried Tona Vita. I took this medicine regularly and faithfully and before the first bottle was finished my condition was improved to a marked degree, and my nervousness had entirely disappeared. The wonderful improvement in my health I attribute alone to Tona Vita."

Tona Vita is on sale at all leading drug stores in Boston. It contains no harmful ingredients and is without question the most remarkable tonic ever before sold to the public.

Tona Vita is being put on the American market by a number of physicians. A similar preparation has proved wonderfully successful in Europe. The tonic will overcome debility, malnutrition, and is particularly successful in building up those suffering from a run down condition.

Nervous, half-sick men and women, with little vitality and poor digestion will most certainly be astonished by the action of this tonic. It is fully equal to a month's stay in a sanitarium, which has been considered the only way to overcome debility. This is no longer true, as Tona Vita will accomplish as much as the rest and diet at a high price sanitarium. The tonic is on sale at all drug stores in Boston.

PUT SPIRIT IN PRINCESS RACE

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

A little of the Banker Hill enthusiasm, fighting energy and ambition to WIN will make 300 of New England's girls who are contending for the "Princess" title, happy two weeks from next Sunday.

The treasures of the whole world, which are on display in Boston's great department stores, await you girls. You will make your own selections and you will say after selecting your gown, hat, opera cloak, lingerie, stockings, etc. "Send the bill to the Boston AMERICAN."

You will spend your vacations taking a splendid ocean voyage, to Bermuda, the island of dreams, to Baltimore, to New York, to Portland, etc.

And all for what? Why, just a little ambition and effort, that's all.

"The race is to the swift and the battle to the strong." Your speed and your strength, Princess candidates, is wholly a matter of enthusiasm. If you are enthusiastic your friends will be.

The time is short! The rewards are great! The effort required is little!

Friday 11 a. m. is the closing time for the receipt of votes for next Sunday's list. You all know what this means.

Another page of candidate's photographs next Sunday.

The campaign of Miss Ruth Ward of No. 18 Cross street, Beverly promises to be no active one. This letter shows how the publication of her picture helped her vote total.

Princess Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I would like to cast those votes for Miss Ruth Ward, as I would like to see her win the first prize more as a compliment on her good looks.

Respectfully,
H. B. FETHERSTON,
U. S. Navy.

MISS RUTH WARD, BEVERLY GIRL, WHO IS OUT FOR PRIZE

BAR SALUTE TO BRITISH FLAG AND AVERT A STRUGGLE

NEW YORK, June 18.—One hundred years ago today war was declared against Great Britain. There will be no new war, for the plan to raise the British flag in Battery Park and salute it by a salute of twenty-one guns is not to be carried out. Such a celebration was suggested by General Ana Bird Gardiner of the Veteran Artillery Corps in a letter to the members. The proposal met with much adverse criticism, and this was voiced by the Star Spangled Banner Association of America. The association promised to make a physical attempt to hinder the raising of the British flag, and for a time it looked as though Battery Park would be a battlefield.

Timely Hints on Hair and Complexion

The trying months of summer will touch lightly the hair that is shampooed with canthrox, a teaspoonful of which dissolved in a cup of hot water is ample for a thorough cleansing. After a canthrox shampoo the hair takes on a silky softness and beautiful lustre and the roots are so strengthened that the sun will not have the blighting effect so noticeable with hair improperly cared for.

Wind and sun will not freckle or tan the skin protected with a simple spurmax lotion. This is prepared by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. The spurmax lotion is invisible when on, is not affected by wind or perspiration, and its daily use rapidly dispels the sallow, oily condition and imparts to any complexion a rose-tint and charming softness.

RILEY'S COLUMN

"BIG ED" WALSH went to the mill twice too often, and Jimmy Callahan believes he can win a pennant by working one man to death, Jimmy has another guess coming. Of course, if he is paying "Big Ed" a big extra bonus—which is improbable—for killing himself off now and for good, he may have thought it was a stroke of genius to try the "spit ball" artist three times in the Red Sox series of four. But a humble newsboy could have told him better. He threw away Saturday's game, and he disposed of yesterday's the same way—working a man to death. He did almost the same with "Big Ed" in the series here.

* * *

WE ought to crow over it in Boston, but there's no pleasure in crowing over the downfall of such a wonder pitcher as Ed Walsh. A pitcher has a certain amount of energy, like other humans, and when it's gone, it's gone. If he uses too much of it at once, he simply ends his career in the box earlier than he otherwise would. Cy Young and Christy Mathewson became good veterans because they were as sparing of their energy as a miser is of his coppers. It's a shame to see "Big Ed" Walsh go the other way.

* * *

BUT here's hoping Callahan will use Walsh in EVERY game the Red Sox play with the White Sox hereafter, and that Clark Griffith will work Walter Johnson in ALL FOUR of the Washington series next week. If Johnson works in ONE game, it's as good as a bet to the Red Sox. If he works in ALL FOUR the Red Sox will win ALL THREE after the first one.

* * *

THIS is an off day in the American League calendar, and the Red Sox spent most of it traveling to New York from Chicago with three out of four of the White Sox series tucked away on ice. They landed in New York today, fairly well tucked away in first place after yesterday's 4-to-1 victory, and they have the Yankees on the card for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Yanks have not been here this year, and since the Boston Sox are speeding at top capacity just now, it is fair to predict that they will win three games of the series of four. It's up to Jake Stahl to see that they do.

* * *

THE Red Sox will need at least three of these games, for next week they will have a tussle with their most formidable competitors—the wonders of the league. They will have to fight the Senators four games in Washington. With the Sox on top, we will have a chance to see just how good they are in such an emergency. The standing now is: Washington, 6; Boston, 5. The Senators are the only ones we have not yet beaten. It looks like a great battle in Washington.

* * *

WALTER DICKSON blew up yesterday afternoon after pitching eight innings of splendid baseball. The Pilgrims and Reds struggled along cueless for eight innings, to the delight of 4,000 spectators. Then it began to rain, Dickson lost control and the Reds smashed him for five hits, scoring an equal number of runs in the last session.

* * *

THE Pilgrims made no errors Saturday or yesterday morning, and they seem to improve their defense every day. They put up the best article of baseball seen at South End Park for a long time, even if they do lose so many games that they are usually hanging around the cellar. It's different from the kind of baseball seen last year.

* * *

YESTERDAY morning's game was as clean and interesting a struggle, replete with exciting features, as you can see anywhere in the big leagues, and the afternoon game was a tense argument until Dickson went to pieces in the ninth. He pitched championship baseball until then.

* * *

IT looked like a Scotch pienic during the Cincinnati series. On the score cards were the two McDonalds, Campbell, Kirke, Cowan and McLean. Mitchell tried to squeeze in, but his "Mike" spoiled the effort. And some mean dispositioned man insisted on trying to adult Sweeney to the "boot mons."

* * *

THERE come the Yankees again, and after that the Athletics. So the Bostonians have a fight ahead, which will last over the Fourth of July.

MURPHY FAVORITE OVER BALDWIN

By JACK CONWAY.

MATTY BALDWIN and Eddie Murphy should furnish one of the best lightweight battles ever witnessed in New England when they clash at the Pilgrim A. A. tomorrow night. It will be a case of a clever, shifty boxer meeting a rugged, two-fisted fighter and the majority of the battle "fans" are picking the boxer to win.

Murphy is one of the cleverest men in the ring today. The South Boston boy is as fast as lightning on his feet, has a quick eye and a steady nerve, knows the boxing game through and through, is game and can hit fairly hard.

Murphy is at his best in ten and twelve-round bouts. His wonderful skill is of tremendous advantage to him and he has bested many rugged battlers in short contests. He has done even more. He has held the great Packey McFarland to a ten-round draw.

Any boxer who can hold the Chicago wizard on even terms in a ten-round scrap is doing some till boxing. Packey's long suit is cleverness, and speed and he is never as good as when he is traveling but ten rounds. Murphy, however, proved to be every bit as fast as Emil Thiry's protege and several prominent Western fight experts claim that Murphy would have an excellent chance of defeating McFarland in a twenty-round go.

This South Boston idol possesses a great left hand and he knows how to use it to perfection. From the moment that the going sounds at the opening of the first round until hostilities come to an end, Murphy keeps jabbing his opponent for all he is worth.

* * *

IT is a mighty difficult proposition to vanquish a good left-handed boxer in a short bout. When a man keeps boring in round after round only to run up against a stiff left jab, he loses his "heart" and does not perform well. One short left jab doesn't greatly hurt a man, but after he has been crossed and jolted over and over again he loses his speed, his legs refuse to move fast, his breathing becomes irregular and he is finally forced to "cover up" in order to save himself.

Murphy has defeated a large number of his opponents in this way. He plays the game safe and lets the other fellow do all the work until his antagonist is completely exhausted and then he lets out real fights for all he his worth.

The Peninsular pride is the best lightweight that has been developed in New England in a number of years. He has been displaying his wares in the squared circle for five years and has come to the front with a rush.

* * *

THERE is a tremendous amount of interest being manifested in the bout. A large number of wagers have been made that Murphy will be returned the victory. The majority of the bets have been made at odds of 10 to 9 with Murphy the favorite.

YALE-HARVARD IN FIRST TITLE GAME

Today's Line-up.

HARVARD.		YALE.
Wingate, ss.		Schofield
Bolton, c.f.		Lt. Cross
Baboon, l.f.		C. Bellis
Potter, 2b.		lb. Riddell
Clark, lb.		2b. Bennett
Gibson, 3b.		ss. Blossom
Wagenhorst, r.f.		3b. Merritt
Reeves, c.		c. Burdette
Hardy, p.		p. E. Reeves

The Crimson baseball squad left the South Station this morning for the scene of their first battle with Yale at New Haven, this afternoon.

The following occupied the private car: Babson, Desha, Bolton, Clark, Coon, Curtis, Gibson, Hardy, Hitchcock, Potter, Osborne, Reeves, Reynolds, Tomes, Wigglesworth, Wingate, Young, Managers Aral and Hubbell, Coach Sexton and Dr. Frothingham.

"Jack" Bartholf did not go, but will rest at Cambridge today and will be sent into tomorrow's game at Soldiers Field. Coach Sexton hopes to get away with the first game and hold his strongest card for the second contest. He will then use Barthoff again on Saturday, should there be a split in the first two games.

There will not be a very large Harvard contingent at the first game, as the date conflicts with the Harvard class-day exercises.

It is believed that Hardy will start the game for the Crimson, with Hitchcock, Wines or Captain Potter himself relieving the little fellow in case he does not go through. Reeves will be behind the bats, and his presence on the field is expected to bolster up the Harvard team a great deal.

Harvard and Yale nines will come to Boston on the same train from New Haven tonight, arriving at 11 p. m. Yale will go to the Lenox and the Harvard players to their usual quarters.

Following the game on Soldiers Field tomorrow the Yale nine will go to Providence and on Thursday play off the postponed game with Brown, whether or not the Harvard series has been decided.

If a third game is required in the Harvard series it will be played at the New York American League grounds Saturday afternoon.

BAY VIEWS BEATING BEST IN THE STATE

By defeating the Bennett A. A. last Saturday and the strong Winchester team yesterday, the Bay Views of South Boston, loom up as the strongest semi-professional team in the State. Manager Judd Logan has gathered together a speedy bunch of youngsters and all teams will have to travel some in order to nose them out. The Winchester team was considered to be the strongest team in the State after its seven straight wins over good clubs by the Bay Views found them easy to the tune of 9 to 0. Stockwell, who is doing the pitching for the Bay Views, is going along at a great rate and should be able to defeat the best teams.

PILGRIMS MEET REDS IN FINAL

The Pilgrims and the Reds clash in the final game of their series on the Walpole street links this afternoon.

In yesterday's double encounter between the clubs, the two split even on the results. The Pilgrims grabbed off the morning game through the lucky hitting of Jackson, Kirke and Campbell and the steady pitching of Hub Perdue.

The afternoon battle went to the visitors by a slambanging rally, while the locals were held scoreless.

The morning game was a battle between Hub Perdue and Humphries, with the honors in favor of the former. As the day was a hot one, conditions were right for Perdue, and he made the most of them.

Humphries did not have much speed, but he got away for five innings with a curve and a change of pace.

The locals started to get to him in the fifth, when Campbell bit one into Columbus avenue and Kirke stung another into the bleachers.

"Hickory" Jackson was the hero of the morning session. He made four trips to the plate and came away with three hits, a single, double and a homer. His home run drive came after Campbell had beaten out an infield hit and was the "blow" that broke up the game.

For eight innings the afternoon game was a pitcher's battle between Dickson and Suggs, but just as the ninth inning began, a heavy rain put in its appearance and Cincinnati scored five runs. Suggs had a little something on the Pilgrims during the entire nine innings.

Bates, who had been out of the game for some weeks, was the only visitor to connect with more than one hit off Dickson, and he pulled three—two doubles and a single.

JIM STEWART PUTS IT OVER KENNEDY

NEW YORK, June 18.—Jim Stewart outfought Tom Kennedy, both of this city, in a ten-round contest at Madison Square Garden last night. The bout was fairly even until the final rounds, when Stewart was the faster.

Tom Kennedy of Lawrence, Mass., outclassed Joe Daw of this city, the referee stopping the bout in the sixth round.

SENATORS GO AFTER MACKMEN

With the Red Sox enjoying a day of rest, the eyes of the baseball world are today centered on Washington, where the Senators clash in a play-off game with Connie Mack's world champion Athletics.

Tomorrow the Senators shift to Philadelphia and the series with the Mackmen is really a battle for peanant honors in the American League, Clark Griffith's band being in line for a hard series with the Red Sox next week.

The return of the Senators ended the most remarkable baseball tour in the history of the great American game, the team making a clean sweep in all fifteen games, and a record of victories—sixteen straight victories all told.

The only sad feature of the triumphant march of the Senators to the thousands of loyal Washington fans is Lee Dineen of Walter Johnson, whose work in the box has done much toward putting the Senators in the running.

Boston will open against New York tomorrow and after a four-game series will journey on to Washington and tackle the flying Senators in a four-game series.

RED SOX HAVE DAY OF REST

CHICAGO, June 18.—The Boston Red Sox caught a fast train for New York, where they tackle the Highlanders tomorrow, immediately after grabbing the fourth game of the series with the White Sox. They beat the Chicago lads 4 to 1, with the great Ed Walsh pitching, and thereby tightened their hold on first place.

It was a happy bunch of athletes which left Chicago. When they came here on Thursday they were leading by a trifle more than one game. When they left they were two games to the good and had dumped the locals into third place.

That figure that they will increase that lead too, because, while they are battling with the lowly Highlanders, the Senators will be fighting the World's Champions. And the Red Sox figure that regardless of how those battles in Washington go, that they will be benefited.

The only thing that the Red Sox did not grab while they were in this city was four straight. They took three games in a row, in addition to a chest of silver which was presented to President McAleer, another which was presented to Jake Stahl and a watch which is the property of Robert McKay. Three games, two chests of silver and a gold watch constitute a pretty fair clean-up in one visit.

The Red Sox were in fair shape when they left here. Heinie Wagner was set down for three days because of his run-in with Umpire Jack Sheridan, following Sunday's game.

In the ninth inning of that game, Bodie hit a high foul and as he ran toward first, threw his bat in the air. The Red Sox held that Bodie should be called out for interference. Since Stahl did not catch the ball, Sheridan couldn't see it that way and Wagner said several things.

The suspension will do the player and his club little harm, however, for Engle substituted for him yesterday and played a corking game. Bill Carrigan will be all right for the series with New York which is opened tomorrow. The left side of his head was still sore when the team left Chicago, but the physicians declare that the soreness will disappear quickly and that there is no chance of a permanent injury.

Speaker surely was the happy athlete as the fellows left. He faced Walsh five times and got four hits. Out of them bumped the boards in the right field fence for a triple, the other time up he hit a line drive to centre which Bodie was exceedingly lucky to capture.

The Red Sox in that last game got to Walsh for twelve hits, including four triples and a pair of doubles. It was one of the worst trouncings that they ever inflicted on the Chicago star and that added to their gayety.

After watching the Boston Lads in the four battles, the Chicago fans certainly have more respect for them than they have had at any time this season.

Billy Gover of N.D.A.A. Joins New York Club

Billy Gover, t hel ong distance runner of theN orth Dorchester A. A., has joined the Morningside A. C. of New York and will car ry the colors of that club in his future races.

Although a youngster, Gover has run several good races while he star ma-thoners. In The Evening Mail's Modified Marathon, May 4, he finished twenty-fourth. In the Yonkers marathon last New Year's Day he finished ninth. In this event he was greatly handicapped by the mud. Being ofa lender build, Gover could not negotiate the heavy going as easily as his heavier opponents, although he led for nineteen miles, entering the Empire City race course ahead of the large field. He weakened three miles from the finish, but a truggled on and finished in ninth position.

Gover will prove a big asset to the Morningside. He is improving with every start, and when the Fall races begin he will be is condition to beat the best there is.

Lad Charters Car to Carry Turf Winnings

LATONIA, Ky., June 18.—Wishing Ring, a castoff from Rome Reapers' stable, galloped down to the wire winner of the sixth race, at odds of $947 to 1, with only three persons holding tickets on her.

One of these was a messenger boy. He had two winning tickets, and when the cashier handed him $3,771 he refused to leave the track without police protection. The guard was furnished, and he chartered a street car to convey his winnings back to Cincinnati. The owner of the horse, Robert McMillan, bet on another horse to win.

Titus Attacks English Rowing Methods Used by Rival Crews

YALE MEN SLOW IN WORK-OUTS

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS.

Mr. Titus is America's greatest amateur oarsman. He is quite expert in dealing with the subject on which he is writing for the AMERICAN'S readers exclusively. In the following article, the second of a series on rowing, Mr. Titus sizes up the comparative ability of the Yale and Harvard crews, which meet in their annual race Friday.

After spending the entire day watching the Yale and Harvard crews going through all their manoeuvres, I must say that both have one fault which I cannot praise—each depends too much upon English methods.

Yale is more at fault than Harvard. She is more English than her rival, especially in the body swing. There is quite a difference between her stroke and that of Harvard.

Despite this, which to me seems a handicap, I look to the Yale crew to make a better showing than it did last year.

Of course it would be an utter impossibility for the Yale men to perform more miserably than they did in their last struggle with Harvard.

Wray's Coaching Helps Harvard.

The rowing authorities at Yale, however, should not imagine that the crew can be classified in any way with Cornell, Columbia or Syracuse, because Princeton, which is really new on the water, rowed Harvard to death in a two-mile race on the Charles River.

In this outing Cornell won with consummate ease. Therefore, the New London duel, from a rowing standpoint, will not be really high class. Nevertheless, the rivalry between the two old colleges is intense enough to make it an interesting event.

Harvard's crew has the advantage of the fine coaching of Jim Wray, a former professional sculler. Wray can be seen every day out in his single scull, paddling alongside of the eight, demonstrating to the boys the various fine points of watermanship.

His crew is much better on the catch than Yale, as the latter's coaches do not row singles and are therefore unable to illustrate in a practical way as Wray can.

Yale will be in a bad way if there is a head wind and rough water at the time of the race. The wind and water resistance on the blades of their sweeps will retard their speed greatly.

Yale Unable to Spurt.

That heavy body swing to the bow of the boat and the heavy finish which they are being taught will all incline to sink the bow of the shell and make the resistance much greater.

At present the Yale men are very rough, though Yale has had plenty of time since last Fall to smooth off, especially as she has not raced any crew this year.

All the time they have been harping on the subject of teaching the men how to row and get the stroke down low. They certainly have kept it down low, and with a vengeance.

I do not think Yale will ever get the stroke to be able to do any spurting at any stage of the race with Harvard.

And especially at the finish, where a sprint is absolutely necessary in a majority of cases.

I have had a good look at all the Yale crews and believe their method is wrong and they will never get to the top of the ladder in boat racing. We will all have to admit that the spirit which exists at the Yale quarters is very fine and pleasant.

Head Coach Rodgers has a charming personality and certainly can arouse a great deal of enthusiasm and win the confidence of his boys.

If Mr. Rogers would be lucky enough to trot out a crew that will beat Harvard, he would be a king around New Haven. So let us wish him good luck on the twenty-first.

Harvard Using Short Stroke.

Sad to relate, the feeling which pervades Yale does not exist at Harvard. You cannot tell who is boss around that camp, and if the "know-it-alls" keep butting in with the coach things will turn out as they did in 1906, when Harvard went over to England to row Cambridge.

We all remember the pitiful tales of Harvard's defeat in that contest.

The Crimson boys are rowing a very short stroke, but they can do a great deal more sprinting than Yale, and if it would come to a close finish, Harvard would win in the final sprint.

It may be well to add that nobody has any idea that it will come to this pass.

Every one is interested in young Harriman's coaching career at Yale, though a number of critics predicted after the Princeton freshman race on Carnegie Lake that Harriman's life as coach was ended.

Instead of spending all that money going over to England and hobnobbing with the British rowing mentors, he should have gone up to Cornell and sought the advice of Charles E. Courtney. As a teacher Mr. Courtney stands out alone.

Worthless Trip Abroad.

Harriman certainly did not learn anything in England that amounted to much. He could have stayed in this country and received much better tutoring than was taught him over on the other side.

Coaches are not made in four years' rowing in college events, which is practically the A B C of rowing.

The boomer Yale gets busy and follows the methods of other American universities which have been successful, and obtains a good professional coach, the sooner will they produce results.

If they would pay the coach a fair salary, and give him complete control for at least four years, there is no doubt that it would be much cheaper from a financial standpoint, and they would suffer less humiliation than has come their way during the last four years.

Get Your Free Tickets to the G. B. Ball Games

Did you get your free ticket to the Greater Boston baseball games in last Sunday's AMERICAN? No—well just wait until next Sunday—but be sure and get your copy early and clip the coupon the first thing.

Then collect the game nearest your home or the games are played in nearly every section of Greater Boston—and go down and root hard for your home team to win.

The article of bali being put up by the new league is first-class and well worth major league prices. A number of former big league stars are playing with the different teams, and they have all they can do to keep up pace with the youngsters, and this in itself shows just how fast the boys are going.

Vacation days are at hand, and the boys and girls will surely want to see the ball games, and in order to give the school boys and girls this opportunity without cost, the AMERICAN has arranged for these free tickets which are published each Sunday in the AMERICAN.

Senators' Premier Twirler Is Laid Up

WASHINGTON, June 18. The Washington American League Baseball Club got home today from its Western tour of sixteen straight victories. Walter Johnson, the pitcher, is ill, threatened with tonsilitis, and was ordered to bed. He will not be in tomorrow's game with the Athletics.

TO SHAKE UP DETROIT TEAM

DETROIT, June 18.—The poor work of the Tigers in their home games against the Eastern teams, in which they won only six and lost ten, has convinced President Navin and Manager Jennings that their three-time champion team is in the advanced stages of disintegration and will have to be entirely reorganized before hopes can be entertained of another first division berth.

The team, with the exception of Cobb and Gainer, has absolutely no ginger. The asking of waivers on Mullin and Summers Saturday was only the first step in the reorganization.

President Navin, as is his custom, declines to mention any player specifically until action is actually taken, but it is understood that Donovan will soon follow his brother players. He has worked but one game this year, and that was three weeks ago.

There is no doubt that internal dissension exists. Because of this, some players who really are good will have to be gotten rid of. This probably will be done through trades.

Jones has played well and poorly in turns this year. Inelegantly's leg is not healed, so he will be used by Moriarty in fielding will but hitting poorly. Crawford seems to be slowing up again in the field and on the bases, though of late his batting has improved.

It is believed that President Navin is ready to get a lot of youngsters and put them in the game, so that they may show what they can do in fast company. He realizes that the older Tigers are going not coming, and that if they cannot with this year they certainly have no chance for the future.

Tommy Ryan Quits as Flynn's Trainer

LAS VEGAS, N. M., June 18.—Tommy Ryan, retired middleweight champion, today resigned as trainer-in-chief of the camp of Jim Flynn, who is to meet Jack Johnson here for the heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

There has not been harmony between Flynn and Ryan since the arrival of the tarriers, and a disagreement arose between Ryan and Curley. The cause of the disagreement is not known.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

It's a Hard Life

NO. 3—TOM GETS ANOTHER JOB AND A QUEER ONE.

By WEX JONES

As I told you in the preceding installment of my diary, my attempts at being a waiter weren't very successful. The only tips I got were tips on how to succeed in life, something I could have learned for myself by studying a book on "How to Succeed," so I determined to seek a new job for the Summer.

Twenty guesses and you couldn't hit on the new job I got for the Summer.

A hundred guesses! A thousand!

No use—nobody could hit on it.

I was the rattles of a rattlesnake!

Honest!

The way it came about was this:

When I chucked up my job—or I should say, "resigned my position"—in the Hotel Longview—I went to Baybeach, where I met a fellow I only know as Freckles. He had as many freckles on him as a toad has eggs.

Freckles was fixing up a sort of booth on the boardwalk, and I stopped to look at him.

"Want a job, Bill?" he asked.

"My name isn't Bill," I replied. "I am Thomas Twitmose."

"All right, Phil," said he. "Want a job?"

"Thomas Twitmose is my name," I said. "And I am anxious to obtain a lucrative position."

"You're on, Jim," said Freckles. "I have a job for you that demands faithful service, but is little strain on the intellect. Come on and I'll show you."

We went inside the booth. "I'm going to exhibit to the startled public the most gigantic rattlesnake in captivity, at the small sum of one dime per capita. The snake will be sixty feet long and will have a rattle that can be heard for five miles. You're to be engineer of the rattle department."

"But there never was a rattlesnake sixty feet long," said I.

"Maybe there never was up to now, Pete," replied Freckles, "but there is one now. Look down into this pit and see the reptilian marvel of the age."

I looked down and jumped back about twenty feet. The pit was filled with what appeared to be the coils of a gigantic snake.

"Don't be scared, Hank," said Freckles. "Only a little of that is live snake."

The scheme was simple enough. Freckles had coiled about sixty feet of rope loose in the pit. Then he had put the tail and body of a small snake into the end of the hose and fastened it there with a washer and a rubber band. With the snake's head waving near the top, it was a terrifying sight, looking indeed like the reptilian wonder of the age.

My job was to stay in the bottom of the pit with a powerful rattle in each hand and spring them at appropriate points in Freckles' talk to the crowd.

"Ladies and gentlemen, here you see, captured at the cost of twelve lives and an Indian, Arizona, the world's greatest rattlesnake, whose bite is instant death to man or beast. Don't crowd too close"——

There was no sprinkling the rattle and the crowd sprinkling back.

Dimes came in showers till the afternoon, when the washer worked loose and the small but hostile snake got loose in the pit with me.

I was so scared I sprang clear out among the crowd and bolted down the street, absent-mindedly rattling those 100 snake-power rattles as I went.

I was released from the observation ward in the City Hospital two or three days later, when I had cooled down.

But Freckles lost a grand rattler.

TOO MANY BANANAS.

I KNOW a little girl, and I bet you know many a little girl like this, who, wherever you see her on a landscape, is plum surrounded by Billys, in various stages of love and jealousy, spooning and scrapping, glaring at one another, and the girl, and once in a while there's one of them picks up his coat and his doll rags, and goes over the hills and far away and out of the game. And once or twice the chap that went over the hills and far away was the one of all others the girl I know wanted to have stay. But she was trying to handle too big a thing—trying to make a sugar pie! And you know what a mess you'd get there. Trying to eat all the bananas there are just because she loves 'em! And I know what woe there is in that. For I did it once!

TOO MANY BEAUX.

Do You Know That—

While American street railways are tipping out various "pay-as-you-enter," "pay-within" and "stepless" cars, European cities have been experimenting with the double deck cars. Two new types of electric car are to be tried in Liverpool, designed to facilitate prompt exit and entrance of passengers. In one of these cars the main feature is a central platform divided into three parts by brass rails, the two outer parts being used for exit and the inner part being the entrance for all passengers, a separate flight of stairs being used for ascent to and descent from the upper deck. In the other type there are two sets of stairs leading to the upper deck from the platform at each end of the car.

Strong protest is being made in South Australia against the continued slaughter of such rare birds as the ibis, the egret, cranes and spoonbills to supply the demands of milliners. The slaughter renders South Australia even more prone to plagues of grasshoppers, and is a prime cause of the decline of its fish resources. As the wading birds disappear the crustaceans that destroy the fish spawn increase in multitude.

UNKNOWN ages ago a wonderful emigration began from the surface waters of the sea to its sunless depths. Creatures whose kind had begun their career in the shallow, transparent waters of bays, inlets, river mouths and sand bars, crawled or swam, down the slopes of the ocean floor, descending deeper and deeper, venturing at each step a little farther into the darkness of the great abyss, gradually accustoming themselves to the gloom, to the increased pressure and to the absence of marine vegetation, until, through the effects of evolution, they had lost all but the most essential marks of kinship with their relatives whom they had left in the brighter waters above.

And thus originated the strange population of the deep sea, which sees nothing of the upper world except the lifeless remains that sink slowly down into the depths. Occasionally the wreck of a ship comes down, and continually there is a descending rain of little animals called protozoa, which have perished above, but are preserved from decay in the pure water, and furnish a large part of the food of the inhabitants of the abysses. The remains of sea vegetation likewise sink down from the surface waters, and add to the food supply. But these sunless creatures also feed upon one another, thus imitating their abandoned relatives above. The carnivorous character of some of the deep sea animals proves that the tragedy of the struggle for existence continues in the submarine night.

At a depth of 2,500 fathoms (nearly three miles) the pressure of the water amounts to about two and a half tons to the square inch. The animals that live amid such pressure have small, soft, yielding bones, and a physical constitution fitting them to their environment. They cannot safely venture far out of their usual haunts. If in pursuit of their prey, they make an unlucky rush upwards, and go too far, they lose control of themselves, the gases expand in their air-bladders and they are hurried on, higher and higher, like runaway balloons, until swollen and distorted, or even bursting from the tension of their imprisoned gases, they perish miserably. Thus, once in a while, they reach the surface.

At the greater depths where they live there is probably no light from the sun. Some have thought that even at the bottom of the sea, or at least to a depth of 2,000 fathoms, there may be a faint illumination, resembling a pale green moonlight; but the better opinion seems to be that below a few hundred fathoms there is no light except such as is furnished by the phosphorescent organs with which some of these creatures are provided. Occasionally one is found having rows of lights giving cells arranged along the sides of the slender body, from head to tail, and as it moves through the dark water it must resemble a long ocean liner with its portholes pouring out streams of light. Others have phosphorescent organs arrayed about their eyes, and throwing out sufficient illumination to enable them to see nearby objects. It is possible that a community of phosphorescent animals living on the sea bottom may resemble a city, with its twinkling lights, seen at night from a balloon.

Famous Dancer Gives Complexion Secrets

(Aileen Moore in Beauty's Mirror.)

I've learned the secret of Delsarte' enrapturing beauty—the wondrous charm that has danced the courts of Europe and captivated vast audiences everywhere. The famous dancer obtains rosiness and complexion. Yet, despite the strenuous calls of her life, she retains the immaculate complexion best described as "indescribable." Delicate pink and white, with the velvety softness of her own baby, but what complexion knows so unrivalled way. This is applied at night in the manner cold cream is used and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead particles of skin which daily appear, and a full, soft, fresh, girlish complexion is always in evidence.

Delicate skin is not spared by a single wrinkle, not even the finest line. She wards these off at bath taking the face in a soothing manner by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a pint of hot water. Bathe the face in this comforting, keep these ingredients on hand and merchants will cheerfully order them for you. Several ounce makes will relieve the information.

Getting On In Life

ANOTHER GREAT ASSET

By THOMAS TAPPER

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN once said of himself as a public speaker:

"I was but a bad speaker, never eloquent, subject to much hesitation in my choice of words, hardly correct in language, and yet I generally carry my point."

The reason for this was his known integrity. Hence it was, he says, that I had so much weight with my fellow citizens."

A business man speaking recently about the one quality he looked for in a man, gave the first place to Reliability. This is the quality that his fellow citizens found in Franklin. He hesitated in public speech, but he never hesitated to be honest; to be there when wanted; to account for himself fully whenever any account had to be made.

The qualities of integrity and reliability are simply other words for what we mean by character, the one thing a man builds every day of his life by his every act. Character has been defined as human nature in its best form, as moral order embodied in the individual.

Character means this: ALWAYS TRY REALLY TO BE WHAT YOU WANT TO APPEAR TO BE.

II.

This very desirable asset—character—differs in the manufacture very widely from a suit of clothes. It cannot be put off and on as a garment. You cannot buy it ready-made. It is a hand-made product and it grows slowly. Lord Collingwood once said to a young man: "The character that you will take with you through life will be made before you are twenty-five.

William Corbett, the English political writer, knew that he must get a little knowledge before he could tell people what he wanted to say. That is, he knew he must work and pay in order to be what he wanted to be. He began with English grammar, learning it, so he tells us, while he was a private soldier. His pay was twelve cents per day, fitting with his knapsack in his lap for a table he wrote out his lessons. This sort of work could be done only in daylight. At night he had no oil or candle, and if he must look at his lesson it had to be done at the fireside when no one else was there. For the purchase of pen or paper, the money came out of twelve cents, which means that it came out of his food.

His case illustrates how men in the same circumstances differ—because they are born with different desires. He once said: I had to read and write amid the talking, laughing, singing, whistling and brawling of at least half a score of the most thoughtless men. I resolved that in that room full of men, ten were brawling and raising pandemonium, while one was quietly building character.

III.

This president of a large corporation told me recently this:

"I take a pride in my relation and standing to the bank with which I do business. I have sustained the honor of my name there for forty-six years. Just as soon as I could I bought a share of the bank's stock, and I have kept on buying it, to establish my faith with them and their's with me.

"If I was asked," he went on, "to give advice to young men about to go into business, or to those who want to get on in life, I should say this.

2—"When you make a promise, signed or unsigned, keep it to the full extent.

3—"Do not go down into the sixties and seventies of life with nothing but a pocket full of money; have a heart full of sympathy, of generosity, and good will.

4—"You can do plenty of business by crowding the other fellow out, and you may be called successful, but do not carry the memory of the injustice of your own actions into old age. It is not comforting.

5—"And once again: Never build business alone—build CHARACTER.

No. 12 Raleigh Mansion

WHEN the door of Corbett's or Meusmore's flat swung open before the skilful application of a skeleton key, a gust of cold air swept from the interior blackness, and whirled an accumulation of dust down the stairs.

It is curious how a disused house seems to bottle up, as it were, an atmospheric accumulation which always seeks to escape at the first available moment. Emptiness is more than a mere word; it has life and the power of growth. A residence closed for a week is less depressing than if it has not been inhabited for a month. If the period of neglect be lengthened into a year, the sense of dreariness is magnified immeasurably.

In this instance, the mysterious abode might have been the abiding place of disembodied spirits, so cold was its aspect, so uninviting the dim vista that sprang into uncertain vision under the flickering rays of a wax vesta struck by the detectives.

But neither the policeman nor his companion was a nervous subject.

They entered at once, closed the door by its latch, and, aided by other matches, found the switch of the electric light.

In this brighter radiance the indefinable vanished. The flat became a cozy, fairly well appointed bachelor's "diggings," neglected and untidy, yet not without a semblance of comfort, which only needed the presence of a sturdy housemaid and a fire to be converted into the ordinary chambers with which the locality abounds.

Their first care was to draw down all the blinds, the neglect of which housewifely proceedings argued the careless departure of a mere male when the place was vacated.

Mr. White agreed, but he didn't know why, so he put a tentative question on the point.

"Don't you see," said Bruce, "that the carpets match the upholstery of the furniture, that the beds have valances, that the spare bedroom for a guest is even more elaborate than that used by the tenant, that care has been taken in fitting up the kitchen, and taste displayed in the selection of bric-a-brac? Only a woman attends to these things. On the other hand, a card tray has been used as a receptacle for a cigar ash, the pictures—no woman ever buys a picture—have been picked up promiscuously from shops where they sell sporting prints, and the sides of the mantelpieces are chipped by having feet propped against them. There are plenty of other signs, but these suffice."

Thenceforth the two men devoted themselves to their task, each after his kind.

The representative of Scotland Yard hunted for documents, photographs, torn envelopes; he looked at the covers of books to see if they were inscribed; he opened every drawer, ransacked every corner, peered into the interior of jars, pots and ewers; appraised the value of furniture, noted its age, and was specially zealous in studying the appearance of the only bedroom which had been occupied so far as he could judge.

A Striking Discovery

Bruce, having given a casual glance around, entered the sitting room, selected the most comfortable chair, and proceeded to envelope himself in smoke.

He had not spent two minutes in Meusmore's flat before he made a striking discovery.

The dwelling consisted of a central passage, dividing two equal portions from the other. That on the right contained a drawing room and a large bedroom, with dressing room attached. On the left were another bedroom, a dining room, a kitchen and a storage room. At the end of the passage, which terminated in the transverse corridor, were the bathroom, a pantry and a small room, empty now, but apparently designed for a servant's bed room.

The furniture, as has been stated, was good in quality and sufficient for its purposes. But the fact which immediately impressed this skilled observer was that the arrangement of the sitting room differed essentially from the other details of the flat.

The same care had not been taken in the disposition of the articles. They had been dumped down anywhere, without taste or regard for suitable position. The carpet had not been bought for this special apartment like the carpets elsewhere. A handsome ebony cabinet stood in the wrong place. The blue china ornaments obviously intended to fill its shelves were littered about the mantelpieces or on small tables, while the Satsuma ware meant for the over-mantel was subtly disposed on the cabinet.

Small matters these, but Bruce thought them more fruitful of accurate theory than the detective's hunt for a written history of the crime.

So, as he smoked, he mused and examined.

"The drawing room was the last place to be furnished," he thought. "The usual course. It remained empty for some time probably. The rest of the flat was arranged by a woman—Mrs. Hillmer, in all likelihood—before the arrival of her brother. Then he came and tackled the vacant room. The history of the place is as plain as though I were present. More than that, a woman—Mrs. Hillmer again let us say—fixed upon these latter purchases, but without measurements. She did not personally see to their adaptability, and she certainly did not supervise their final arrangement. Now, why was this? Again, these things are more worn than those in the other rooms. Were they bought second-hand? If so, why? A woman thinks most of her drawing room. It is the last place in which she would economize."

Mr. White entered, anxious and puzzled.

"Found anything?" inquired Clark, without looking at him.

"Not a rag, not a piece of old newspaper with a date on it. A lot of papers were burned in the kitchen grate, but from the remnants I judge that they were mostly bills."

BRUCE ACCIDENTALLY DISCOVERS THE BIG CLEW

He did not move. He sat as one transfixed. What a weapon for such a deed!
(Posed by William P. Carleton of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

"The place has been systematically cleared, eh?"

"It looks like it."

"Going to hunt here?"

"Yes. You don't seem to take much interest in the premises, Mr. Bruce, though you persuaded me to do a bit of house-breaking in order to get here."

"I find the quietude good for thought, Mr. White. Be good enough not to make more noise than is absolutely necessary."

The other sniffed. He was disappointed. He hoped for something tangible from this visit, and the outlook was far from promising.

"This room appears to have been lived in a good deal," he growled.

The Big Clew

"Is there any other way?" His voice snapped out the question as if it held the barrister personally responsible for his failure to gain a clew.

"No, Mr. White, I should have guessed your point of view exactly."

"My point of view, indeed! Do you want me to draw up another chair and light a pipe? Should we be enlightened by tobacco smoke?"

"I cannot trust your tobacco. Try a cigar."

The detective angrily thumped a Chesterfield lounge to see if it betrayed aught suspicious.

At that instant Bruce's glance rested on the fireplace. The grate contained the ashes of a fire—a fire not long lighted. This, combined with the undrawn blinds, argued a departure early in the morning.

"He went to Monte Carlo by the day Channel service," mused Bruce. "He may have departed a few hours after Lady Dyke's death, as Mrs. Hillmer was not certain as to the exact date."

Somehow the few cinders attracted him. They had, perchance, witnessed a tragedy.

Suddenly he stopped smoking. He was so startled by something he had seen that the policeman must have noticed his agitation were not the detective at that instant intently screwing his eyes to peer behind the back of the elaborate cabinet.

On the hearth was a handsome Venetian feader. Into each end was loosely socketed a beautifully modelled piece of bronzework to hold the firirons. That on the left was whole, but from that on the right a small spike had been broken off.

By comparison with its fellow the missing portion was identical with the bit of iron embedded in the skull of the murdered woman. Of this damning fact Bruce had no manner of doubt, though the incriminatory article itself was then locked up in safety in his own residence.

He did not move. He sat as one transfixed.

What a weapon for such a deed! Was ever more outlandish instrument used with murderous intent? The entire bracket could easily be detached from the feader, and would, no doubt, inflict a terrible blow. But why seize this clumsy device when it actually supported a heavy brass poker?

But this answered of madness, of the wild vagary of a homicidal maniac. It was incomprehensible, strange beyond belief.

Yet as Bruce pictured the final scene in that tragedy, as he saw the ill-fated lady stagger helplessly to the ground before a treacherous and crushing stroke, a fiery light leaped into his face, and his lips set tight with unflinching purpose.

Had Meusmore been within reach at that moment he would assuredly have been lodged in a felon's cell forthwith. No excuse, no palliation, would be accepted. The man who could so foully slay a gentle, kindly, high-minded woman deserved the utmost rigor of the law, no matter what the circumstances that led to the commission of the crime.

It was not often that Bruce allowed impulse to master reason so utterly.

In strange altruistic mood he asked himself why he did not spring from his chair and, tearing the bracket from its supports, exhibit it to his fellow-worker, while he gave, in a few passionate sentences, the information that would set the French police to scour the Mediterranean littoral until they found the White Heather. Of what matter to him was the suffering of a pirate or assassin? Did the man who killed Lady Dyke reek of these things? Yes, he would do it——

Another Find

But a cry of triumph from the detectives arrested the fateful words even as they trembled on his lips. "Here's a find!" was the shout. "Thinking is all very well, Mr. Bruce, but hard work is better. What do you make of that?"

"That" was a letter, which, in the manner known to many a puzzled housekeeper, had slipped down behind a drawer in the cabinet, to be crushed against the wardrobe of the back, and its there forgotten and unnoticed.

Even in his perturbed state the barrister could not help glancing at the crushed document, first noting the date, the letter 15 of the year just closed, with the superscription, "Mountain Butts, Wyoming." There was no envelope.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

HOW GRACE BENSON BECAME FAMOUS FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

Free Prescription That Can Be Prepared at Home Without Expense.

Grace Benson, famous for the marvelous beauty of her hands and arms, in a recent interview says: "If I could tell every woman about the prescription that has caused all this talk about my hands and arms they could every one of them make their hands and arms just as beautiful as mine. I am glad to have the opportunity to give my receipt free to the world. It will help every woman to improve her personal appearance."

When I asked her if she would allow me to publish the prescription she quickly answered: "Certainly, only too glad to have you do it." Turning to a desk, she wrote it on a slip of paper and handed it to me. Here it is. "Go to any drug store; get an empty two-ounce bottle, also a one-ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter of an ounce of witch hazel, then fill with water. Apply night and morning."

She further said: "This prescription makes the skin transparent and removes all defects, such as freckles, tan, sun spots, roughness and sallowness. A single application works a marvelous transformation. Where low collars are worn it can be applied to the neck with equally as startling results. It is absolutely harmless, and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair."

Resinol clears away pimples and blackheads

Pimples and blackheads disappear, unsightly complexions become clean, clear and velvety, and hair health and beauty are assured by the regular use of Resinol Soap, with an occasional application of Resinol Ointment. AFTER LONG SUFFERING

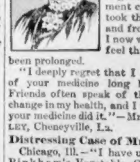
These Two Women's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Read Their Own Statements.

Cheneyville, La. — "Some time ago when in poor health, suffering from feminine ills, I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I soon felt better and gained in strength and flesh. A gradual improvement continued as I took the Compound, and from 120 pounds I now weigh 155, and feel that my life has been prolonged.



"I deeply regret that I did not know of your medicine long before I did. Friends often speak of the wonderful change in my health, and I tell them that your medicine did it." — Mrs. J. W. STANLEY, Cheneyville, La.

Distressing Case of Mrs. M. Gary.

Chicago, Ill. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache and it has certainly made a new woman of me. After my first baby was born I was left a perfect wreck. I was so weak I could hardly do my household duties and suffered with an awful backache. But since I have used your Compound the pains in my back have left me and I am strong again.

"My mother used it also through Change of Life and speaks very highly of it. You can use this letter any way you wish. I think it is only fair for one who has suffered as much as I, to let others know of your great remedy." — Mrs. M. GARY, 2968 N. Ridgeway Ave., Chicago, Ill.

CLARK FORCES ARE CONFIDENT

BALTIMORE, June 18. — The Clark forces are showing more spirit and confidence today than at any time since Baltimore became the Democratic mecca.

Senator William Joel Stone of Missouri, chief among the managers of the Clark campaign, has come over from Washington and put a complete quietus upon the rumored antagonism to Speaker Clark threatened by the alleged struggle among his supporters over the temporary chairmanship of the convention.

"I wish you would make this statement for me to the Hearst newspapers," said Senator Stone today to the AMERICAN correspondent. "I am for Clark. I have no other interests to serve. The names of several fine men have been mentioned for temporary chairman. I do not care much about them. Any honorable man would preside with dignity and perfect fairness. No man worthy of the place could afford to do anything else.

"The friends of two or three whose names have been mentioned have approached me to ascertain how I stood on the temporary chairmanship. I said to them and say now, that I consider that of very minor importance. Speaker Clark's friends cannot afford to engage in a fight merely to confer some fleeting honor on one friend as above another.

"So far as time is concerned, I favor that it be adjourned from day to day. I would like to see Clark President and Bryan Secretary of State, because he will make the best candidate and elect him because he would make a good President. I would like to see Bryan favor no one of our friends, but these smaller ambitions must be put aside in the common interest in the nomination of Clark.

On the question of the abolition of the two-thirds rule, which he was quoted at St. Louis the other day as favoring, Senator Stone explained that he had not said that statement only to indicate the growing sentiment among Democrats everywhere to do away with the ardent and cumbersome custom.

JUDGE PARKER FOR CHAIRMAN

BALTIMORE, Md., June 18. — Alton B. Parker, once nominee for president and the leading candidate for the "temporary chairmanship of the Democratic mecca. Convention, is among the vanguard of leaders on the ground for the convention. It was learned on good authority that under present plans Judge Parker undoubtedly will be the temporary chairman.

A conference which caused keen interest among the advance guard of the Democratic National Committee passed a short while at the convention hall where the national gathering will be called to order. Parker's name in the conference with Chairman Mack, Secretary Woodson, Thomas Taggart and Roger Sullivan.

AUTO COLLISION INJURES SEVEN

Seven persons were injured today when two automobiles going at high speed met in a head-on collision at the junction of Fellaway East and Fellaway West in Medford.

Jay F. Bennett, his wife and two children of Medford, Bridget Burke, Thomas F. Burke of Whitinsville and Joseph Saverino, chauffeur of the Burke car.

Bennett was driving his own machine, with his wife and two children in the rear seat. He was going at good speed when the car of Thomas F. Burke appeared coming from Fellaway West. In the Burke machine were Mr. and Mrs. Burke and the chauffeur, Joseph Saverino.

Bennett was thrown through the windshield and landed on the road. His wife and children were thrown out.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke were both thrown from the car and landed in the roadway. Saverino, the chauffeur, was tossed over the wheel of his car into the gutter.

HURT WHEN CAR STRIKES WAGON

Coleman Sullivan, fifty-three years old, of No. 98 West Fifth street, South Boston, was injured actively today when the wagon he was driving was struck by a trolley car at A street and West Broadway, South Boston. He was hurled out. The motorman and conductor were held by the police pending an investigation. Sullivan was taken to the Carney Hospital, and he sustained a fracture of the left leg and injuries to his back.

Elevated officials expressed themselves today as pleased with the way the police are taking care of the "L" crowds. "Everything handled better," was the "L" verdict on the June 17 traffic.

The Elevated is borrowing experienced motormen from other trolley companies to break the Boston strike, according to a letter received at headquarters today from Columbus, Ohio. The letter would indicate a so-called "gentleman's agreement" among trolley companies.

The Columbus letter was received today by James C. Colgan of the national executive board of the trolley union. It was written by J. F. Liddy, business agent of the Columbus union at Columbus. The letter informs Mr. Colgan that the Columbus Street Railway & Electric Company has sent the Boston Elevated fifty motormen "on non-union motormen, who left Columbus the latter part of last week, and who are presumably in Boston today."

District Attorney Pelletier may be asked to take action against the Boston Elevated Company as a result of the dismissals of Elevated employes which is given by the union as their principal cause for strike.

The union leaders assert that in many cases motormen were paid non-union rates after they were discharged because of disabilities. This, the strikers claim, is in violation of a state law.

Strike leaders were in consultation with Attorney James H. Vahey on the matter.

Mrs. Hilton Asks New Names for Daughters

LOWELL, June 18.—Mrs. Marie Eliza-beth Ruth Hilton of Christian Hill, the high priestess of the Mazdaznans, or sun worshippers, and her second husband, Dr. George W. Hilton of proprietary medicine fame, came before Judge McIntyre in Middlesex Probate Court today with a petition to adopt legally Mrs. Hilton's two daughters by her former marriage, also to change the girls' names.

It was a Mazdaznan day in court. Mrs. Hilton, tall, stately and still quite attractive woman, wore a long white lace coat over her Summer suit.

The girls, Ruth Mildred Brubaker and Constance Columbia Brubaker, are twenty-one and eighteen years old, respectively. Nettie White sults set off their dark eyes and hair and red cheeks effectively.

Mrs. Hilton said she obtained a divorce from the first husband, James Brubaker of Chicago, several years ago, with the custody of the girls.

Besides having them legally adopted by herself and Dr. Hilton, she wished to have their names changed from Brubaker to Hilton and from Nettie Marians Hilton and from Constance Columbia Brubaker to Constance Marguerite Hilton. The girls said they wished it, too.

Judge McIntyre granted the petitions regarding the older girl, who is of age. But the younger one is a minor. So the judge asked for a copy of the divorce decree. The Hiltons left saying they would get it.

DOCTOR USES FETCH TO GET BIG MACKEREL

Here's a story about a 400-pound horse mackerel and a Boston physician. He landed the 400-pounder by electrical means. The fish reached Boston today on the steamship Prince Arthur from Yarmouth, N. S. It was consigned to J. N. Gardiner, the T wharf wholesale fish dealer.

The big fish, as the doctor says, put up a two-hour fight and was only landed when the doctor resorted to his other bottle—"sculpine," the dull silver sulphate slug. One side of the boat by taking a half hitch in the line around a cleat. The Rubbling line hauled in and the shock line—not the other was dumped into the water. The rest was easy. The monster succumbed after a few inhalations and was speedily dispatched.

Copper Shares Selling Higher In Dull Market

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 18.—Midday—The Boston market is quiet but firm, and there were advances for most copper shares where there were changes. Superior went up one point in the first hour and Calumet & Hecla five. There were fractional gains for Greene-Cananea, North Butte, Ray Consolidated and Isle Royale.

Outside of the copper list, United Fruit rose 5 points. American Zinc sold a little higher.

The latest report about the price of copper metal by the copper producers' agency is that the rate has been advanced to 17⅝ cents a pound for electrolytic, which was the price asked in Europe yesterday.

It is reported about the Houghton mine that the winze is now down 20 feet in the Baltic mass and that the drift is 100 feet. Much stamp copper is also reported.

A dispatch about the Lake Superior Smelting is buttoned at 3,671 feet in trap and General Manager Harris thinks the three-foot lode of that vein will be struck next week.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered that the rates, practices and regulations of the anthracite railroads shall be investigated.

New York Market Opened Dull.

The New York market started dull with traders paying more attention to conventional developments in Chicago than to copper news. The rise to Amalgamated was the feature of initial trading. American Smelting and other leading coppers showed some strength at the start. American Can did not long retain its early gain. There was more demand for steel common, Erie preferred, Pennsylvania and Union Pacific, but not much movement in Reading and Missouri Pacific.

The Curb was irregular.

Aside from interest with trading in London, where American stocks were steady, but not in much demand, Canadian Pacific was sold considerably in that market. Neither it nor Grand Trunk seemed benefited by good crop reports. Copper shares were stronger and Rio Tintos advanced to 82½.

Copper Metal and Mining.

Foreign demand for copper has been resumed and is partly due to the decrease in visible supplies in Europe, owing to foreigners statistics. The 26½cts strike at Perth Amboy has greatly reduced stocks in the country. The latest quotations on this side of the Atlantic for copper are reported to be 17½ cents a pound. In Europe the metal is selling at 17⅝. The Perth Amboy strike of the Guggenheim Exploration Company, where the labor difficulty happened, has a daily production of about 500,000 pounds. The National Conduit & Cable Company and the Standard Underground Cable Company are also reported to be affected by the strike. Their plants tied up by strikes. In regard to production in the United States last month, Dr. E. H. Rollins' copper production strikes at consumers' plants most for the month under consideration."

The Boston News Bureau says: "The difference of opinion that has existed among members of the Tennessee Copper directors regarding dividend action, has been settled, and it is likely that a dividend at the next meeting, to be held late in July, will be declared on the stock. It is known that some of the directors have been advocating the rate of 75 cents, but the $1 declaration will be unanimous. It has been figured that the advance in copper metal proves to above 17 cents a pound would increase the company's income from copper alone to $800,000. Profits from sold production would approximate $700,000 or better."

Thompson, Towle & Co. says: "It seems rather strange to be talking about dividends on Isle Royale, but it is believed by leading interests in the property that the time is not far distant when it will be ready to hand out the first big melon. Isle Royale should earn at least $750,000 and in 1912 be producing at the rate of at least 15,000,000 pounds of copper per year. It is a matter of comparatively but a few days before the mill will increase its production by 200 tons of rock per day."

Big Bank's Fine Quarters.

The Second National Bank, one of the oldest and soundest institutions in Boston, will be doing business in its new quarters at No. 111 Devonshire street on June 24. Organized as a national bank in 1804, the Second National had its quarters in the Sun Building for more than forty years. The bank's new home is one of the handsomest structures in New England. Its architects, Parker, Thomas & Rice, sought to save it of the Italian style, and the site was the home in colonial days of William Hobbins, a London merchant, who built the house in 1730. It was the first house on Devonshire street. The Old South Boston Neck in the seventeenth century. The exterior conformity of the building is equal to its exterior beauty. It is a model structure for banking purposes, and the steel barricades of its cash and security vaults are said to be the thickest and heaviest burglar proof doors in New England.

The capital of the Second National is $2,000,000, its surplus is $2,000,000, and its undivided profits at 912,096.94. It has deposits of more than $25,000,000. Officers and directors are: President, Thomas P. Beal; vice-presidents, William L. Pierce and Frank W. Hunt; cashier, Thomas P. Beal, 2d; W. F. Atkins, Gilbert H. Bauer, Walter C. Barker, Thomas P. Beal, Jr., Henry R. Dee, Charles F. Fairbanks, Elwood W. Hodgkins, Percy S. Lee, Lawrence P. Loring, Edward Lovering, William Endicott Putnam, James M. Pennington, Neal Rantoul, Jacob W. Seaver and Lucius Tuttle.

Financial News in Brief.

It is reported that when the strike war of the Pennsylvania road trainmen is announced on Monday next a warning will be issued in favor of getting out. This does not imply of necessity that they will do so, but it gives authority to the officials of the trainmen's organization to declare a strike in accordance with the road's management.

The Government of Argentina has given the Bethlehem Steel Corporation a $400,000 contract for steel rails.

It is reported on Wall Street that the Wabash Railroad company has agreed to the plan for readjustment of at least $40 a share on both preferred and common stocks. The assessment will provide $26,900,000 for reorganization, and of this amount $15,000,000 will be used to pay off the outstanding receiver's certificates, and the balance, $25,400,000, less about $2,000,000 necessary to refund receiver 4½ per cent. notes, will be available for improvements and betterments. It is also understood that holders of Wabash 4 per cent. bonds will retire 50 per cent. in new bonds and 50 per cent. in new preferred stock.

The fiscal year of the road ended with May 31, showing a net income of $11,000 pounds for the year, during the same preceding period. Receipts aggregated 19,918,000 pounds and disbursements 19,907,000, of the amount was imported from Japan.

The long locomotive Corporation is to extend its plant on the Ohio city from which it takes its name to a capacity of 1,000 locomotives a year, and when enlargements are completed will give employment to 4,000 men. The extension will cost $2,000,000. Of this amount $1,000,000 has been subscribed by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and $1,000,000 by the Standard Steel Car Co. The bonds are callable at 110.

The creditors of the former Carnegie Safe Deposit company have received a dividend of 42.85 per cent. through the New York State banking department. The corporation owned Boston on September 23 last.

Washington statistics for May state that this country's exports for that month totalled $170,000,-000, against $172,256,000 in May, 1911, and the imports $135,000,723, against $159,814,100 a year ago. For the eleven months ended with May exports were $2,029,264,004, against $2,024,174,000 a year ago.

George L. Walker, editor of the Boston Commercial Bulletin, and Harry Burte & Superior mine says writes: "When in Butte recently I was impressed by the lively interest mining men were taking in what all agreed were the most remarkable ore bodies ever opened up in the district, the size of deposits in the Butte & Superior mine. Apparently the property had been carefully developed by competent mine engineers, geologist and mining men of standing and ability, and as a result I have no hesitation in saying that the property personally the week, and I am satisfied that the Butte & Superior is one of the richest properties owned by the largest and most persistent bodies of high grade ore I have ever seen in a mine, while reminding me strongly of the immense bodies of chalcocite ore in the Copper Queen mine and Calumet & Arizona at Bisbee.

Sales of 100 shares or 1 each yesterday transactions on the New York Stock Exchange totalled almost 9,000 shares, and thus is the lowest trading record for one hour on eight years.

How the steel trade is booming is indicated by the recent report of the Carnegie Steel Company which has 10,000 more workmen.

One recent prediction about the Kansas wheat crop is that it will be the biggest ever known. It is also said that crop prospects in Oklahoma and Texas are "mighty good."

It is probable the names of the Rock Island road are changed to show improvement from now on. It is said that the management will have to spend millions of dollars in improvements.

WOMEN ATTACK IN MALDEN MEAT STRIKE

The first food riot in Greater Boston since the Faneuil Hall has attacked the high cost of living was started by Malden women, took place in that city today. Five policemen responding to several frantic telephone calls, found 100 enraged housewives on Bryant street centered about Joseph Stanetsky, a furniture dealer from Everett.

The police arrested Stanetsky and Mrs. Annie Matt on charges of assault. Their trial was continued in June 21st.

Mrs. Matt is one of the officers of the newly-organized Woman's Auxiliary to the Retail Butchers' Union of Malden, and is a tall young woman of prepossessing appearance.

She declared Stanetsky struck her. Stanetsky complained to the police that Mrs. Matt and other women struck him, pulled him from his wagon and buffeted him savagely.

Police say the women were angry because Stanetsky refused to return beef purchased by them at the shop of Harry Silverman, No. 172 Bryant street, and that his refusal to return the meat started the riot.

STATE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE CHOSEN

The committee appointed by Speaker Grafton Cushing to select a legislative campaign committee for the purpose of assisting in the election of a Republican legislature in Fall has selected the following: William A. Bellamy, Dunstable; Alvin E. Bliss, Malden; John H. Brackett, Framingham; Russell S. Frank, Cambridge; Harold H. Flower, Greenfield; James E. Fowler, Westborough; Charles L. Gifford, Barnstable; Samuel F. Hayes, Huntington; Edward R. Hathaway, New Bedford; Clarence W. Hobbs, Jr., Worcester; Alexander Holmes, Kingston; Lester W. Jeney, Mattapoisett; Victor F. Jewett, Lowell; William S. Kinney, Lowell; Edwin F. Liley, Milford; John L. Saltonstall, Beverly; John H. Sherburne, Brookline; Charles L. Underhill, Somerville; Thomas W. White, Newton, and Ernest A. Wits, Springfield.

"THE ROSARY" WELL RECEIVED

"The Rosary," Edward E. Rose's "powerful and emotional play that is founded upon an opinion of purity," proved itself just as much a hit when presented at the Majestic Theatre as it did a season or so ago. It needed no introduction to Boston theatregoers.

The audience, a large one on account of the holiday, was in the best of humor throughout the performance, the fascination of seeing their favorite actors and actresses of the Lindsay Morison Stock Company in the roles of the familiar play holding their attention.

Miss Sanderson, taking the part of the handmaiden from Bellows Falls, Vt., who was lacking in the sense of humor and ability to see a joke, proved immensely funny. She received thunderous applause throughout the evening, and her acting was as piquant as ever.

The leading lady, Anna Cleveland, always a favorite in Boston, made an extremely interesting heroine. She acted the parts of the twin sisters, on whose troubles and misfortunes the plot of the play is founded, in the most creditable manner.

Howell Hansel, Edward Nannery, James S. Bennett, Dudley Hawley, Wrytey Birch and Frances Woodbury also are worthy of mention for their creditable work.

Scenic Temple.

Besides Lenna Howe's ladies' orchestra, which supplied incidental concerts, the programme at the Scenic Temple yesterday had three headline vaudeville acts and a new list of motion pictures.

Hub Theatre.

Hardelles, in an acrobatic act, was the headline attraction at the Hub Theatre yesterday. There were a dozen other features and a new list of motion pictures.

Fishing Trips.

Bass Point.

The holiday crowds at Bass Point yesterday made business lively for the hotels, besides sending many dollars to the pockets of the operators on the midway. The boats to Bass Point and Nahant were crowded at every trip.

Globe Theatre.

The new programme at the Globe Theatre yesterday was enlivened by the Excelsior Trio, in a sensational act; Thornos and Adkins, in liquid air experiments that were unusually interesting, and a half dozen other vaudeville features. The picture program was new and attractive.

Paragon Park.

The holiday crowd at Paragon Park yesterday eclipsed any gathering that has ever visited the Nantasket resort. Not a little of the praise for this goes to the cabaret show in the Palm Garden, which Manager Dodge has copied from the continental entertainments of the same type.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

WISH WYNNE HEADS KEITH'S

Wish Wynne, the dainty impersonator from the English music halls, proved to Boston theatregoers by her performance at Keith's Theatre that she is possessed of natural ability and is the equal, if not the superior, of the numerous English comedienes who have become famous through American tours. Many rural and city characters of England were depicted by Miss Wynne. All her songs are given as monologues. This form of entertainment gained great favor with the audience. A decided hit was made with her talk to the women in which they were advised to refrain from young and told what to do in society.

A sketch of a schoolgirl in the slums of London was pathetic, while the adventures of a poor little country lassie, who is taken to a fair for the first time by her beau, was full of comedy. The recital of the adventures of a cowboy brought forth the wonderful artistic temperament of the young artist.

The Old Homestead Octette, which was one of the features of Dennis Thompson's production of the "Old Homestead" for many years, is just as popular as ever, sing in the farm scene of the famous rural drama.

Those two burlesque millionaires and laugh provokers, Cook and Lorena, created much hilarity as in former appearances. Rawson and Claire, in their sketch, entitled "Yesterdays," were well appreciated. Manning and Ford, the clever colored act of jig and fancy dancing, demonstrated their ability as masters of the terpsichorean art. Jones and Edel Benz were a credit to their justifiable slogan, "Something Doing All the Time." The Brown Brothers, with their saxaphone sextet, are excellent musicians and comedians. The two Zeraldas in a novel specialty act, and Chapman and Berube, hand-and-foot balancers, completed an exceptionally fine program.

Orpheum Theatre.

The new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday included Le Maire, Chase and company in a blackface comedy called "A King for a Night." It was a laugh-maker Maxim's Models was another feature that held everybody in close attention. Six other acts and new pictures completed the programme.

Norumbega Park.

There were two big crowds in the open air theatre at Norumbega Park yesterday. The program was timely, including Clifford and Burke, blackface comedians; the Marvelous Vannersons, in a comedy horizontal bar act, and a half dozen other lively features.

Shows That Remain.

"Little Miss Fix-It" began its second week at the Tremont last evening. Miss Alice Lloyd is proving a capable star in this attractive piece.

The third week of "The Climax" was begun at the Castle Square Theatre yesterday. This has been the best late season attraction Mr. Craig has ever had.

The Majestic African Hall Pictures continue at the Park. They make an interesting entertainment for those who are interested in big game.

The Durbar in Kinemacolor, showing the ceremonies of King George's visit to India, is drawing many people to Tremont Temple.

MAYOR GREETS THE CREDIT MEN

Mayor Fitzgerald and State Treasurer Elmer Stevens welcomed the delegates to the seventeenth annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men, which opened its sessions at Huntington Hall today.

The association, which comprises 15,000 members and represents millions in capital, had delegates from every State in the country when President Harry New rapped the gathering to order.

In welcoming the guests the Mayor expressed the hope that their convention would not parallel the momentous gathering at Chicago. He scored the bankers and the financial men of the country for not getting together and framing some banking and currency legislation to be presented to Congress.

A. C. Carpentier of New Orleans and Enoch Rauh of Pittsburg, Pa., responded to the address of welcome.

This afternoon the delegates enjoyed an automobile tour of the Boston park system.

CYMRIC TAKES A RECORD LIST

The White Star liner Cymric sailed for Queenstown and Liverpool at noon today with one of the biggest cabin passenger lists she has carried. There were 260 first cabin passengers in the first cabin, and not another person could have been squeezed in unless Captain Howard parted with his cabin, as most of the other officers did.

Among cabin passengers were: M. J. Dwyer and Miss Frances Dwyer, James McLaughlin, director of music in the Boston public schools; Mrs. McLaughlin and Miss Anna McLaughlin and W. S. Richardson.

Fourteen Bulgarians who were on the Cymric July 10, going to one address in Steelton, Pa., and who were held on suspicion of being contract laborers, were deported. The case was bitterly contested.

The ship carried 300 steerage passengers, nearly all of whom were Finns and Scandinavians making visits to their former homes.

MEDFORD FIRE CHIEF HURT TWICE AT FIRE

As a result of being twice injured while responding to alarms, Chief C. H. Bacon of the Medford Fire Department is confined to his bed today. Turning from Riverside avenue into Spring street, Chief Bacon was thrown from a ladder truck, narrowly escaping being crushed by the wheels. He refused, aid, however, and remaining on the truck went to the fire. While directing the firemen, a batch of burning shingles struck him on the head, inflicting severe burns.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF J. REED WHIPPLE

The funeral of J. Reed Whipple, proprietor of the Touraine, Young's Hotel and the Parker House, was held at the new Old Church Christ Scientist square this afternoon. State and city officials and men prominent in the business life of the city were present. The services were simple and conducted by the Rev. George A. Gordon, pastor of the church. The body was sent to New Boston, N. H., for burial.

Selecting a Man to Fill Lincoln's Place

Will the Republicans pick a man to thunder from the clouds and tell the people what to do?

Or will they pick a quiet stout gentleman to tell the people what organized money thinks the people should do?

Or will two men run against each other as Republicans and actually compel the people to think of candidates and principles instead of thinking only of party?

In any case there will not be chosen a man to act as the people's agent and find out what they want and do that—

CHICAGO, June 18, 1912—Colored gentlemen and white gentlemen are here to name a candidate for the Presidency.

Sixty-six colored gentlemen, by united action, could probably settle and select the candidate. They look very serious and earnest, these sixty-six colored brethren, carrying their heavy responsibilities and considering various suggestions.

Many of them wear brand new suits of black broadcloth, and all of them look grave, but expectant. They hope for the best.

Chicago, at this moment, is the most mixed city in the world. There is somebody here from everywhere. Every State has its headquarters, every candidate and important politician has his headquarters. Every big newspaper and hundreds of little newspapers and other periodicals have their headquarters.

Every pitiful forlorn hope, from the man who thinks he might possibly be nominated, if both the other two died, to the man desperately anxious for small, small job—all are here.

All of these thousands of visitors and tens of thousands of natives go about asking, "Well, what do you think?" and nobody thinks or knows anything accurate. Each thinks as he hopes, and the vast majority think and hope in a dull, stupid way, with little sense of the humiliating spectacle of national inefficiency spread out here. To describe what is said and what happens is the wise thing.

There is a huge blazing sign outside on a hotel. It reads, "California delegation, solid for Roosevelt." Behind that sign a band plays, not stopping for more than two minutes at one time. Back of that sign, also, is the "National Roosevelt headquarters," one flight up in the Congress Hotel.

From those headquarters, brilliant with lights, music and crowds, come frequent thunders from the spirit that rules, while capital cowers in its lair, or wonders what its campaign contribution will be.

George Harvey, who lost all his illusions at Peacham, Vt., before he ever saw Professor Wilson, calls attention to the fact that as soon as Roosevelt had issued a tenth denunciation of political dishonesty and impending doom, his own paid band played, "What the Hell Do We Care."

It is a very mixed convention, enemies next door to each other. White and colored delegates of a business turn have hardly time to remove their "my hat's in the ring" badge outside a Roosevelt room before turning into a Taft room.

Fellow-citizens, you should see those Roosevelt headquarters in the big hotel. And writers of our history one hundred years from now should see those headquarters.

Many tables, many desks, papers on the floor, men and women struggling, squeezing past each other, hundreds of blazing lights and a blaring band just outside and the deification of Theodore Roosevelt in picture and in story.

"We love him," he shouts, waving his hand and choking with emotion. "We love him, we love him, and follow him till death." (Long pause.) "We love him because he has always loved us." (Much applause.)

"He will teach us; he will lead us. He will show us the way. He is our hope. We owe him everything, and we love him. Even the little baby hardly six months old loves his Teddy bear." (Frantic applause at this homelike touch.)

Such talk has been heard sometimes at a primitive religious revival. But in this case the talk was about Roosevelt, not about God, and the pitiful, childish adoration addressed to a living man.

There the man was, in many a picture, for all to see and love more than their poor little brains could express.

The far end of the hall blazes with light, and on the wall, enormous in size, flashing under the lights surrounding it, is a highly colored full-length picture of Roosevelt, standing in war paint above a dead lion. The lion is larger than life, and his face has a proud look that says, "I died happy."

No Roosevelt fanatic looks upon that picture with a dry eye. Each soul murmurs, "He killed the lion. He will take care of me. He will be kind to his people, and we shall dwell in his mighty shadow like the little flower beneath the great oak."

Once, nothing but a trip to Africa could show you populations groveling at the feet of a lion killer. An African savage kills a lion, eats the lion's heart and is adored as a superior, brave being.

No need to go to Africa for that interesting spectacle, now.

Go to Roosevelt headquarters.

You see him solemn. You see him gay. You see him gnashing

Swatting the Fly!

Remember the little boy who said, "Quick, mother; give me the hammer—there's a fly on baby's nose?" The story didn't tell what happened to the fly or the boy—or the baby. And in the story above we don't know, so far, what will happen to the boy, the fly—or the window.

3—THE BALK. One of the Dark Horses sticks his forefeet in the ground and refuses to run. It is none other than our old acquaintance, Charles Evans Hughes.

4—ANOTHER BALK. Scared by the rattle, whizz, bang and rattle of Claude Eclaire Roosevelt's train, the other Dark Horse pauses for breath.

5—MISSOURI ON THE JOB. Claude Eclaire Roosevelt is greeted at the station by his pal, Mo. Mo., you know, is the guy you have to show.

6—THE TWO LINCOLNS. It is a great contest between Desperate Desmond Taft and Claude Eclaire Roosevelt. Both try their hardest to look like Lincoln, but Rosamond knows her Claude is a second. Mark our words, this isn't the end of the Taft.

Selecting a Man to Fill Lincoln's Place.

his teeth and stamping both feet. You see him in quiet reasoning, only pounding with both fists.

What did he ever kill. Not even a cheetah—hardly a muskrat.

It shows how silly it is to compare Lincoln to Roosevelt—how silly it is to compare anything to Roosevelt unless, perhaps, the Rocky Mountains piled up on top of the Himalayas, with the Pacific Ocean running down one side—and even that kind of a natural wonder would not equal him in strength and grandeur.

What will happen today and during the next days no one knows. But this is certain. If the crowds here, and the crowds they represent, control, Roosevelt will be nominated. And if he is defeated at first by the cunning politicians, he will nominate himself—then more moving pictures and a national show really worth seeing.

He has made a definite and very cunning decision—according to positive statements made at 1 o'clock this morning.

The struggle will begin with the choosing of temporary chairman. Taft wants Root. Roosevelt wants Borah.

Roosevelt intends to form a convention of his own, in the same hall, if Root is made chairman.

He has planned ingeniously to avoid the appearance of bolting his party.

He says that seventy-eight contested delegates have been seated by fraud, and that they do not represent the Republican party.

Whatever the convention may do without the votes of the seventy-eight, Roosevelt will endorse.

If the convention, without the votes of the seventy-eight, nominates Root, Roosevelt will submit.

But, if the seventy-eight are used to nominate Root, then the Roosevelt men will organize a convention of their own, right in the same hall—and then, dearly beloved, the fur will fly as in the dark African jungle, and heaven help the weaklings.

He knows that without the seventy-eight men against him, whom he calls criminals, the Taft men cannot have their way.

Therefore, his plan is this:

If candid argument and proper private evidences of regard, combined with public opinion, swing around a sufficient number of white and colored brothers—Roosevelt will win, and all will be well.

If Taft holds his organization and rampant crime strips the fair diadem from the honored brow—then a first-class fight, with cries of fraud and yells of treason.

There will be a Roosevelt nomination or a Roosevelt fight, and in any case very interesting proceedings at this convention.

For later proceedings kindly see news pages.

What "Friend Wife" Means

By DOROTHY DIX

THERE is one slang phrase that always makes a hit with me, and that is "Friend wife."

Do you get that? Friend wife! It's what every man should be able to call the woman to whom he is married, and yet not one man in ten thousand could truthfully use the phrase. There are wives who are sweethearts, wives who are affinities, wives who are sparring partners, wives who are debating opponents, wives who are tyrants, wives who are slaves and domestic drudges, but how seldom a wife who is a friend! Yet the best thing that any woman can be to her husband is to be his friend. It is the whole of the law and the prophets as regards how to be happy though married.

What is a friend? A friend is the one of whose companionship you never weary—the one without whose presence no pleasure is complete. How many men do you know who feel that way toward their wives? The average wife is many admirable things to her husband, but she is seldom a companion. He esteems her for her noble qualities, but he doesn't take her along with him, if he can help himself, when he wants to have a good time.

If you desire to get a line on how little companionship there is between the great majority of husbands and wives watch them at the theatre, or at the restaurants, or any of the other places of public amusement. You will see them sitting up in a silence so thick that you could cut it with a knife, yawning in each other's faces between the acts of the play, and stuffing themselves on bread and butter at the restaurant while they wait for their order to be served. Not a word have they to say to each other unless they get into a scrap about what they shall have to eat, or whether they put the cat out of doors when they left home. In any company you do not need a diagram to show you which are the married couples. You can pick them out by their bored expressions.

They may be lovers, but the lovers' litany is short, whereas the repertoire of friendship is exhaustless. You soon weary of asking the adored one "Oose ducky is oo?" and telling a woman how beautiful, and wonderful, and angelic she is, but you can talk forever to the friend whose mind is but a mirror in which you see your own thoughts glorified, and who touches no subject but to turn a brighter and more entrancing light upon it.

What is a friend? A friend is the one to whom you can go with every joy and sorrow, certain of understanding, sure of sympathy and help. How many men find such a friend in their wives? How many women have such friends in their husbands? So few, so tragically, pitifully few!

It is one of the heart-breaking facts of matrimony that one of the first things that the average husband finds out is that he can't even be frank with his wife without her going into hysterics. He has to lie to her when he wants to stay downtown of a night and play a game of cards, or go to dinner with some man. He wouldn't dare to tell her that he had happened to meet some woman he knew near the door of a restaurant and had asked her to lunch with him. He'd only tell these things to his friends—and not one of them would be "friend wife."

Why, the great majority of men are not sufficiently friendly with their wives to even talk over their business with the ladies, or to open up their hearts to them and show them their hopes, and plans, and ambitions. When they want to talk about real things like that they go to some man. It's mighty seldom that a man finds his real confidante in "friend wife."

Nor are women any more fortunate in this respect. It doesn't take long for a clever woman to discover that if she wants her household machinery to move smoothly she must keep most of her real thoughts and ideas to herself, and all of her troubles, and that the best way to work her lord and master is to make him comfortable, and obtrude her soul longings on him as little as possible.

The romance of courtship is a tissue of chiffon that wears to rags and tatters with a year or two of married life. Passion dies of satiety, and then the home must go to pieces like a house of cards unless it was founded on the solid rock of friendship. After the glamour and the thrills of youth and beauty and desire are gone wedlock becomes the ball and chain that bind two prisoners who are naked together to do a life sentence at hard labor unless they have a friendship for each other that makes this enforced companionship a never ending joy to both.

Therefore when a man hails the partner of his bosom as "Friend wife" we know that he has given the high sign and the password to the Lodge of the Happily Married.
